

Garner's Name to Be on Ballot in Illinois Primary

Wisconsin Potential Testing Ground in Democratic Contest

Chicago, Feb. 9.—Julius F. Smietanka, Chicago attorney, announced today he would enter the name of Vice President Garner in Illinois' presidential preferential primary at 4 p. m. today.

He said a petition bearing more than the minimum of 3,000 signatures would be accompanied by Garner's certificate of candidacy. Thus the voters of Illinois may have an opportunity to express their preference for either Garner or President Roosevelt in the advisory balloting April 8.

The president's name was entered in the primary last Saturday by the Kelly-Nash Democratic organization here.

Smietanka said he would be in the secretary of state's office in Springfield at 4 o'clock a. m. to enter the name of the candidate. Accompanying him, he said, would be Colonel William M. Barnum, a Chicago businessman, and Emil Hurja of Washington, editor of The Pathfinder, a news magazine. Smietanka said Hurja was formerly an analyst for the Democratic national committee, who came very close to predicting the Roosevelt vote in the 1936 election.

The deadline for filing for the presidential primary is midnight tonight. Reports that Garner's petitions were in circulation arose yesterday, but they were not confirmed until Smietanka issued his statement today.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Wisconsin came to the forefront today as a potential Roosevelt-Garner testing ground and eclipsed even Illinois as a probable gauge of the strength of presidential material in both parties.

The action of the Democratic Party Organization of Wisconsin in filing President Roosevelt's name along with a partial slate of delegates yesterday made it appear almost certain Wisconsin would be one of the first states to consider the third term issue in a presidential primary. Delegates for Vice President Garner were entered last week.

Under Wisconsin law, the president does not have to announce whether he is a candidate, and unless he specifically objects, his name might be carried on the April 20 ballot without his intentions having become known.

In Illinois, Garner backers were at work in a drive which, it was reported, may culminate in filing petitions to put his name on the Democratic ballot for the April 9 primary. Garner declined comment.

Delegates Not Bound
Midnight is the deadline for entering names in the Illinois balloting, which does not bind delegates. Democratic organization leaders in the state already have entered Mr. Roosevelt in the race.

Thomas E. Dewey of New York has filed in Illinois on the Republican ticket, and last night challenged other aspirants in his party to run against him.

It appeared, however, that Representative Hamilton Fish of New York would be his only opponent. Leslie Wheeler-Reid of Chicago took petitions for Fish to the state capital, saying they would be filed before the deadline.

Wheeler Won't File
Prospects were that a Roosevelt-Garner contest in Wisconsin would be unencumbered by the entry of others who have been mentioned as possible Democratic nominees. Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) said to have been flirting with the thought of getting on the Wisconsin ballot, was reported to have told friends that he would not do so if the president's name was to appear.

The Wisconsin primary appeared to promise a much more extensive test of the strength of Republican presidential aspirants.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) said he would wait until after a Republican state meeting in Wisconsin Feb. 13 to determine whether he would put a slate of delegates in the field. Friends of Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) already have entered a slate, as have friends of Dewey.

Senator Bridgman (R-N.H.) said that his friends were working for an unopposed delegation.

Illness Proves Fatal To Milwaukee Pastor

Milwaukee, Feb. 9.—Mr. Michael J. Domachowski, 64, pastor of St. Vincent De Paul Catholic church, died yesterday following a two-week illness. He came to Milwaukee from Poland when three years old and captained the Marquette university football team one season. He was twice decorated by the Polish government for "exceptional service to Poland in America."

Waupaca County Marl Project Is Given O. K.

Madison, Feb. 9.—The public service commission authorized the Waupaca county agricultural committee today to remove marl from 24 Waupaca county lakes and ponds for distribution to farmers at not more than 35 cents a cubic yard.

Dog Scared of Mail Box After Being Hit by Automobile

Evansville, Ill. (AP)—Prof. Baker Brownell of Northwestern university took along his bull terrier, Tim, when he posted a letter recently. Tim, who likes to chase cars, was hit by one just as his master reached the mail box.

A few days later dog and master again went to the mail box. Brownell was sure Tim now would be frightened of automobiles.

Not at all—but he was scared stiff of the mail box.

May Create State Bureau to Solve Fishing Problem

Commercial Fishermen Expected to Favor Corcoran Suggestion

Post-Crescent, Madison Bureau
Madison, Feb. 9.—A problem which Governor Heil has publicly wished to dispose of, the commercial fishermen's fight with the state conservation commission, remained with him today as it appeared that the fishermen would continue their appeals to him to aid in rescinding or suspending a new regulation for net mesh sizes which they claim will make it unprofitable for them to operate.

It was considered likely today that the fishermen would urge the executive to accept a suggestion of Chairman James Corcoran of the commission, which is also anxious to get rid of the troublesome commercial fishing problem, to establish a separate state bureau to handle supervision of fishing activities on outlying waters.

Corcoran thus revived a plan initiated several years ago by the fishermen themselves, but which originally won no support from the conservation department or conservation commission.

Measure Killed
Fishermen, under the leadership of George Lince of Sumac and Everett LaFond of Two Rivers, in 1936 succeeded in getting the Progressives to include a plank in their platform favoring the creation of a bureau of fisheries to regulate commercial fishing operations on Green Bay and the Great Lakes. In the 1937 legislature, however, the Progressive majority was unwilling, according to the record votes on a bill introduced by the fishermen's representatives, to take such action. Instead, the legislature enacted a bill sponsored by Assemblyman Frank N. Graess of Sturgeon Bay, by which the legislature delegated to the conservation commission the function of regulating the industry.

Out of the commission's effort to exercise the authority so delegated arises the controversy which has waged since 1937 to today, and which Governor Heil complains has been before him at least once a week since he was elected governor in 1938.

According to LaFond, fishermen will continue their fight against the new regulations, despite the commission's refusal to adopt a suggestion by the governor to declare a 60-day reprieve during the Lenten season.

Their immediate efforts, however, probably will be concentrated on winning a case on constitutionality of the statute under which the commission exercises its authority, a case now pending in the Marinette county circuit court before Judge Delting of Sheboygan.

WANTS PATROL BOATS
Post-Crescent, Madison Bureau
Madison — Governor Heil said yesterday that he will again propose to the state conservation commission that it authorize a system of patrol boats to patrol commercial fishing waters in the enforcement of state conservation laws.

He suggested that such a system would be more efficient than the stationing of conservation wardens at ports of entry on the Great Lakes.

When an inquirer remarked that boats might cost several thousand dollars apiece, he said "what if they cost $10,000? business which spends a hundred million dollars a year can stand that."

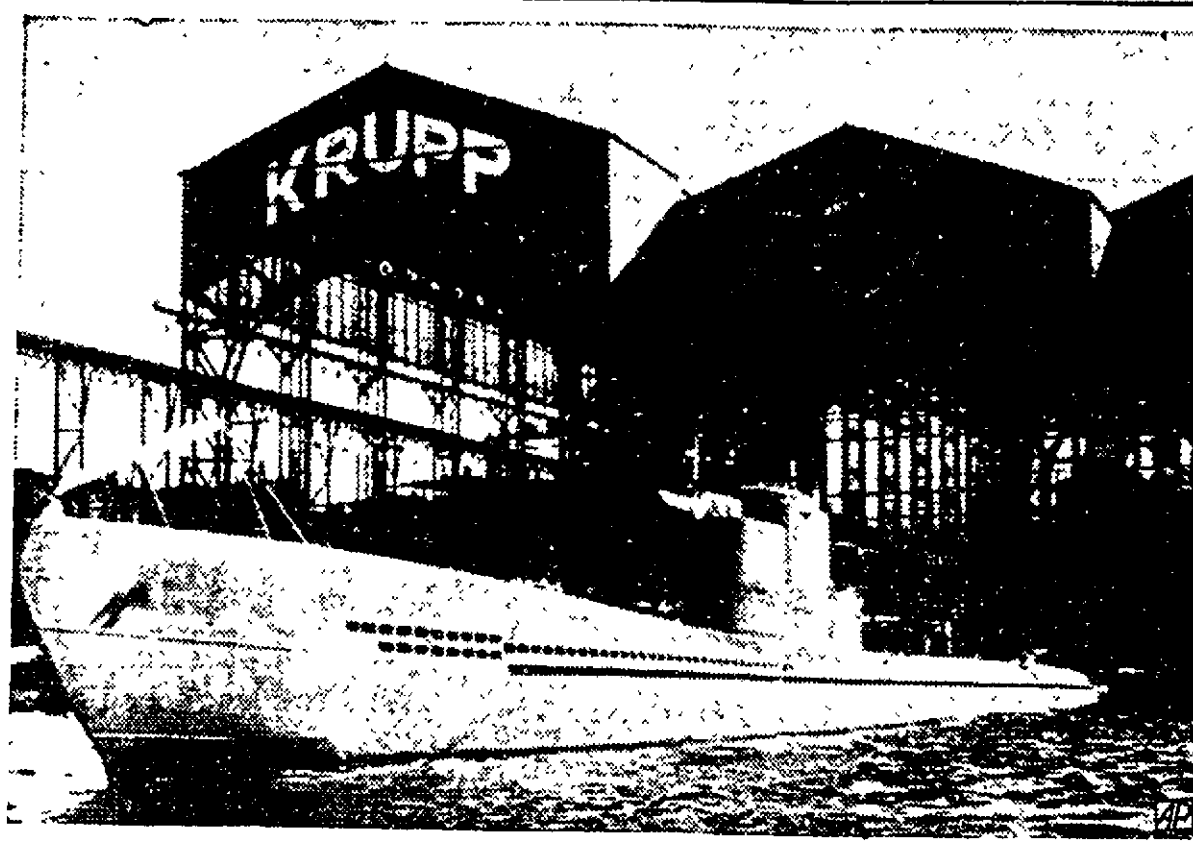

He inferred that not more than half a dozen such vessels would be sufficient to patrol the waters of Lake Superior, Lake Michigan, and Green Bay, outlying waters in which the state has jurisdiction.

Republican 'Elephant' Welcomed at Capital

Washington, Feb. 9.—Wisconsin's Republican congressional delegation welcomed to Washington today a huge streamlined "elephant."

The nine-foot, 1,800-pound creation of Alfred C. Cookson of Green Bay, Wis., held aloft between his tusks and trunk a timber labeled "Constitution." Cookson towed it in a "town on a trailer" behind his car. It arrived during the recent Democratic national committee meeting but was kept under wraps until the Democrats had gone.

Failure of India to Reach Compromise on Demand Will Increase England's Burden

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York, Feb. 9.—The fresh failure of the government of India and the great nationalist party to reach a compromise on the demand for independence is bound to increase the burden of England, especially in view of the constantly recurring reports of Russian ambitions to sovietize Hindustan.

Of these two problems, by far the greater, it seems to me, must relate to the internal situation of India. The red threat to England exists, as it has ever since Bolshevism came into being, but Britain's danger lies not so much in any military thrust as in an effort to spread the Communist doctrines by taking advantage of the nationalist ferment.

England has to thank a curious paradoxical situation for keeping the political lid from blowing off in India. Mohandas Gandhi, aging and frail little nationalist leader, is himself acting as a restraining influence on his followers, not a few of whom would like to take advantage of Britain's pre-occupation in the war to push their cause.

Marking Time

The mighty dispute, which involves a potential 350,000,000 Indians, remained deadlocked after further conferences this week, and the combatants agreed to mark time for a bit. The position, as outlined by Gandhi, is that the nationalists insist the viceroy give a statement of British war aims paving the way to self-determination for India, whereas the viceroy declined to make such a declaration in advance.

However, it isn't surprising that these differences should exist, for there is no solution as simple as "yea, yea," or "nay, nay." The position is complicated by many controversial issues of such magnitude as to make it one of the world's most difficult political problems.

This nationalist demand for independence, by the way, is nothing new. It was going strong when I was in India more than 20 years ago, and in less intensity was on its way scores of years before that. To my amazement, Indian leaders visited me from all over that vast empire to lay their case for freedom before me, obviously in hope that I might write about it.

One of the greatest difficulties in this situation lies in the religious differences. The great majority of the nationalists are Hindus. The Moslem minority charges that the Hindus are out to establish domination over India.

Receive Assurances

Only this week Mohammed Ali Jinnah, leader of the all-India Moslem league, called upon the viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, to insist that Moslem interests be safeguarded in any settlement. Jinnah received assurances on this point.

The British say there is danger of precipitating a bitter war between these elements in trying to reach a settlement of the demands for self-government.

Then the hundreds of ruling princes present another complication. These nabobs, who for generations have dealt direct with the British crown, at least in theory, are fearful that they will come under an independent Indian government, thereby losing their princely standing and prerogatives. Any final settlement must take care of this issue.

The situation has been rendered much less dangerous by Gandhi's announcement that he is looking for an honorable settlement without even the employment of the weapon of civil disobedience by the nationalists. England admires a man who plays cricket, and the government isn't likely to forget the Mahatma's gesture in these difficult war days.

It will be surprising, however, if Britain sees its way to make any extensive political readjustment before the war is finished.

Mayor at Chilton Opposed in Race

Thompson Will Have John B. Diedrich as His Opponent

Chilton—Mayor Harry L. Thompson has expressed his intention to run for reelection and John B. Diedrich announced this week that he will be candidate for mayor at the approaching spring election. Thompson and Diedrich opposed each other in the 1938 city election, and according to Otto A. Horst, city clerk, are the only two who have taken out nomination papers thus far. All city offices will be voted upon this spring with the exception of three aldermen, Claude Nachwey, George J. Bruckner and Henry M. Ortleb, whose terms do not expire until 1941.

DEWEY IN STATE

Wives of Badger Congressmen are State Boosters

Take Part in Wisconsin Program as Part of 76 Club Meeting

Washington, Feb. 9.—It was Wisconsin day at the congressional 76 club luncheon this week and members of the organization—wives of first-term congressmen—had a bag of Badger products to remember it by. Mrs. John C. Schafer, wife of the Milwaukee congressman, told the group that the products, ranging from a bottle opener shaped like a beer bottle to cheese samples and stockings were representative of the state's industries.

"Known as a hotbed of political change and pioneer legislation, Wisconsin not only gives the women of Wisconsin equal rights," she told club members, "but probably gives them closer to 75 per cent of the rights."

Citing one example of women having better than a 50 per cent break, Mrs. Schafer said that married women can own their home property in Wisconsin but asserted they have a definite share in their husband's property.

"The motto of the state is 'On Wisconsin,' and I believe from its history that that is where it is going—on," she said.

Mrs. Joshua Johns of Algoma, Wis., wife of Republican congressman, is president of the club.

Won't Send Delegates To Wisconsin Rapids

Madison, Feb. 9.—William H. Riley, chairman of the Dane county Democratic committee, today informed National Committeeman Charles E. Broughton, of Sheboygan, that this county would not send a delegation to the Wisconsin Rapids state conference Feb. 12.

The conference was called by Broughton to endorse a slate for the party's national convention at Chicago.

"The Democrats of Dane county on Jan. 12 elected delegates to a statewide conference of Democrats held in Milwaukee on Jan. 28," Riley said. "These delegates were unanimously instructed to select candidates for delegates to the 1940 Democratic national convention who should be pledged to draft President Roosevelt for a third term. By this instruction the Democrats of Dane county performed their manifest duty to a great president and to their country. They refuse now to reconsider or dilute this performance by sending delegates to any other meeting."

Billy Becher, 1012 N. Badger avenue, returned home yesterday from St. Elizabeth hospital, where he had been a patient.

Roosevelt Doubts Nation Will Sell Arms to Finland

had bought during the World war. It was a question, he said, whether British 75s, though still new after 22 years, could be considered surplus.

The army also inherited some British 75s from the World war period, he said, and while they were not as good as the French 75s there might be argument whether they should be disposed of.

The president said many neutral countries had inquired about materials available in this country.

Asked about a pending proposal to lend Finland the money she had already paid on her post-war debt to the United States to purchase anything she might want, the president would not comment, saying his message to congress on that had expressed his attitude.

On Capitol Hill, the state department went on record, through its legal adviser, as having no objection to the sale of Finnish government bonds to private investors in this country so that the Finns may obtain money to purchase military supplies.

Green H. Hackworth, Secretary Hull's legal adviser, expressed this opinion in testimony made public today by the senate foreign relations committee on a bill to increase the capital of the export-import bank $100,000,000. The bill, approved by the committee, was called up for senate consideration today.

After Hackworth had said the department would not advocate a government loan to the Finns to purchase arms, Senator Harrison (D-Miss.) asked if the same attitude applied to the sale of Finnish bonds. The senate approved yesterday a resolution by Harrison urging the securities commission to expedite action on any bond application made by the Finns.

President Roosevelt conferred late yesterday with Secretaries Hull, Woodring and Edison, and the discussions were said to have concerned the advisability of disposing of surplus army and navy guns.

A Norwegian official mission has been inquiring into the possibility of purchasing artillery in the United States. Prince Bertil, son of the Swedish crown prince and head of a Swedish purchasing mission, also has been received by Mr. Roosevelt.

The army has on hand hundreds of field guns and large stores of rifles unused since the World war. Officials said Mr. Roosevelt had the authority to declare the arms surplus material and to be subject to disposal.

Strong support for the Finnish loan legislation was evident in the senate, but leaders said a final vote might not be reached until next week. The bill, by Senator Brown (D-Mich.), would double the $100,000,000 capital of the Export-Import bank.

Chairman Pittman (D-Ne.) of the foreign relations committee, which approved the bill, 12 to 6, said there was no doubt in his mind that the senate would give it the same overwhelming endorsement that it placed yesterday on another Finnish aid proposal offered by Senator Harrison (D-Miss.).

It adopted, 65 to 3, a resolution urging the securities commission to expedite any application which the Finns might make to sell their government's bonds to private investors in this country.

Heil Reveals Project for Stepping Up Distribution Of Badger Dairy Products

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — Preliminary details of an ambitious system of warehouses in Wisconsin and dispensaries in principal U. S. cities to aid in the problem of marketing and distributing Wisconsin's huge annual production of butter and cheese were unfolded here last night by Governor Heil in a conference with newspapermen.

The governor said that he is working on the plan with a group of "fine attorneys," and that he was confident that whatever capital will be required will be provided by "public-spirited citizens." He did not name them, and would not say whether he has yet approached any investors on the proposition.

As explained by the executive, it was apparent that he has been working on the project for some time—a private corporation would build a series of warehouses and refrigerating plants at strategic points in Wisconsin.

Farmers would be invited to ship their dairy produce to the warehouses and cold storage plants, where they would receive warehouse receipts for their deposits according to a "formula to be determined."

The warehouse receipts, according to the governor's plan, would be negotiable at banks for cash.

Would Get Rebates
The corporation would arrange for distributing facilities in principal urban markets of the nation, selling at prevailing prices under a Wisconsin brand. Any difference between prices paid to farmers and the selling price, after deduction of administrative overhead, would be rebated to the farmer-producers, according to the governor's explanation.

The plan was believed to be modeled upon suggestions made earlier by Director Ralph E. Ammon, and other students of Wisconsin agricultural problems who have pointed out that the Wisconsin dairy industry is composed of thousands of small production units, which separately are unable to advertise, promote and merchandise their product and to take advantage of markets which tests have proved are available.

"There are too many places in America where the consumer can't buy Wisconsin cheese branded as Wisconsin cheese. We aren't ashamed of it. We should go out and sell it. This state isn't big enough to produce the butter and cheese which this country can buy, and will buy, if we advertise with dignity and energy," the governor observed.

When a reporter compared the governor's project to the ill-fated LaFollette Wisconsin Agricultural authority, abolished by the Heil administration, Heil objected.

Private Venture
The WAA, he explained, was subsidized with state funds. His plan, said the governor, will be entirely independent of the state government, will be managed and financed by private citizens.

He said no difficulty in cashing the warehouse receipts called for in his plan. "They will represent food in storage, and will be as good as gold," he said. "Banks will cooperate; others will; money isn't paying interest now anyway."

Heil said that state experiments in marketing packages of Christmas cheese have shown a tremendous, but undeveloped market for Wisconsin dairy produce. He foresaw expansion of Wisconsin's present gigantic dairy manufacturing industry if the industry will go out and take advantage of those opportunities.

Asked how far his project had progressed, when it could be expected to be begun, he replied: "This will be started before I retire as governor. I can tell you that."

No one inquired further on the specific date.

Vote Extension of Scout Drive; Fund Amounts to $1,362

Teams Led by Weller and Mullen are Tied for First Place

Leaders and workers in the Appleton district boy scout campaign at a dinner meeting in the Conway hotel last night voted to extend the drive through today, making it three days instead of two.

The campaigners also decided to hold a fourth dinner gathering tonight and selected the Y. M. C. A. as the place. The dinner will be held at 6 o'clock.

Yesterday's collections reported at last night's meeting amounted to $497.75, bringing the 2-day total up to $1,362.25. F. N. Belanger, chairman, reported this morning.

Teams led by H. J. Weller and John Mullen are tied for first place in team standings, each with $298, the chairman reported. Nine teams with about 80 workers are taking part in the annual drive.

The campaign opened Wednesday morning and, as was voted last night, will be continued through today. Workers will clean up remaining details tomorrow and part of next week.

The general campaign was preceded by an advance gift drive of which Fred C. Heintz was chairman. Money received in the campaign is used in maintaining and improving the scouting program in the district.

S.E.C. Might be Named Trustee of Bankrupt Utility

Considered Juicy Plum For New Deal Patronage, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Will a billion-dollar private business be tossed into the lap of an overworked, busy governmental commission to be toyed with by some underling and to be the basis for fat jobs for henchmen of the New Deal?

This question is being asked in many quarters here as word comes that the securities and exchange commission may be appointed one of the trustees in the pending bankruptcy of the much-tangled capital structure of the Associated Gas and Electric system.

Reports have reached here that the treasury department wants the S.E.C. appointed. This is a surprising development, for the treasury has no interest in the problem except to collect some back taxes, and it is well known that taxes are a first lien on assets. Certainly a few millions in tax payments would seem to be assured out of total assets estimated at a billion dollars.

Just why the S.E.C., which has so many tasks to perform under two major statutes, should seriously consider becoming a trustee in the Associated Gas case is a mystery. One is inclined to believe that the S.E.C. will not accept such a position because it will make the S.E.C. responsible in part for actual operations of a giant utility system. Likewise, the commissioners themselves would not have the time to give to proper supervision and the work might have to be turned over to a dummy director or subordinate, which would not be in keeping with the well-expressed philosophy of former chairman William O. Douglas, namely, that directors of businesses should direct and not pass the buck to others.

Judge And Trustee?

But the biggest complication arises under the public utility holding company act. The Associated Gas system is one of those which must undergo the integration prescribed by law. Since the S.E.C. is to act in a judicial capacity with respect to all such integrations, it is hardly plausible that the S.E.C. would wish to assume responsibility even in part for the management of the business. Otherwise, the S.E.C. as trustee would be offering a plan of integration to S.E.C., sitting as a judge of integration plans.

There is an additional reason why the S.E.C. might find it embarrassing to act as trustee. It was the action of the S.E.C. in refusing to permit an upstream loan to pay dividends in the top holding company of the Associated Gas which precipitated the bankruptcy proceedings into which the company was plunged. In such circumstances, investors in the Associated Gas will naturally wish to be assured that such action was in no way related to the possible desire of the S. E. C. to act as trustee and to operate the utility system itself.

Most guesses hereabout are that the S.E.C. will not wish to serve, even if asked to do so by the federal court, though it would, on the other hand, be a juicy plum from a patronage standpoint and open up a series of jobs to the politicians—a contingency which it is difficult to visualize the S.E.C. as wishing to meet, especially since the New Deal members of the commission have lately denounced all suggestions that they are being influenced by any political considerations.

Holding Companies
The Associated Gas operating properties are believed to be in good shape, but the problem of pyramided holding companies is so intricate that even some utility experts say it will be difficult to unravel without the whole-hearted cooperation of H. C. Hopson, who is reported to have been seriously ill these last few months and unable to give time in the affairs of the company.

Disinterested observers say that the Associated Gas structure is so difficult to understand that the S.E.C. found itself unable to do anything but refuse the upstream loan, and it is the view of the S.E.C. commissioners that no other course was really open to them.

Persons familiar with the Associated Gas company affairs insist, on the other hand, that after the company had shown its good faith by settling a huge jeopardy tax for $8,000,000 and submitted a plan for reorganization and integration, the S.E.C. could easily have extended a refunding obligation for 90 days, and that since earnings were on the increase, the issue could have been refinanced. It is further asserted that the loss to the public, which is estimated to comprise 225,000 stockholders and to involve $25,000,000 of market values, might have been saved if the S.E.C. had been disposed to be cooperative with the company. Now a legal reorganization has been precipitated which will doubtless take three or four years to work out and, before it is over, it is not unlikely that the action of the commission in allegedly causing losses to investors may become the subject of suits against the government in the court of claims, though this route is admittedly long and futile as a rule for claimants.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 9.—British public opinion, as measured by a special poll just completed in England, is strongly in favor of giving help to Finland but is anxious to put a limit on the extent of that aid.

The overwhelming majority of voters in the study are for sending British arms to the Finns in their war against Russia, but are not in favor of sending British troops.

The issue of giving aid to the Finns has stirred wide discussion in England, as it also has in the United States. The amount of sentiment in the United States for a non-military American loan to the Finns was measured and reported by the American Institute of Public Opinion early this week. The British attitude toward Finland was measured by the British Institute of Public Opinion, an affiliate, through a cross-section survey in England, Scotland and Wales on the following issues:

"Do you approve or disapprove of Britain sending arms to help Finland?"

Approve 74%
Disapprove 18%
No Opinion 8%

"Would you approve or disapprove of sending British troops to help Finland?"

Approve 33%
Disapprove 50%
No Opinion 17%

Ever since the early days of the Finnish-Russian war, Prime Minister Chamberlain and his government have lost no opportunity to convince the people of the impor-

ance of Finland's victory. British fighting planes and some anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns and ammunition have been sent to the Finns.

If the sentiment found in today's survey continues, this policy of giving aid is not likely to meet with much public opposition, provided it stops short of sending actual British man-power.

Favor Arms Aid
The extent of support for arms shipments of Finland is well indicated by the fact that voters of the Opposition Parties, as well as government supporters, favor the proposition in the survey. More than 80 per cent of government voters said they approve arms shipments, and 60 per cent of opposition voters. Sending troops to Finland, however, is disapproved by both government and opposition voters, the former with a small vote and the latter by a large majority.

Public opinion in the United States, the American Institute's surveys find, is strongly sympathetic to the Finnish cause, but only a relatively small majority of voters—less than six in every ten—favor a government loan to Finland—one of the proposals suggested to help the Finns. In contrast to British sentiment, which favors giving direct material aid to the Finnish armies, American voters fear, judging by their comments, that an official government loan for outright military purposes might involve the United States in Europe's war crisis.

Surveys of public sentiment by the British Institute have continued without interruption since the outbreak of war, and the results have been published in England without interference by the government or the censor—probably the first case in history where

Windshields Must be Kept Clean, Warning Of Safety Bulletin

Three points of safety should be kept in mind about windshields, the state motor vehicle department states in a bulletin to Arnold Krueger, Outagamie county highway commissioner. They are:

Display of any sign, poster or other non-transparent material, other than a certificate or paper required by law, is illegal. Every windshield must be equipped with a device for cleaning rain, snow or other moisture. The device must be so constructed that it can be controlled or operated by the driver.

The windshield must be kept reasonably clean at all times.

public opinion has been systematically measured and reported in a nation at war.

The surveys are conducted among a representative cross-section of the population in England, Scotland and Wales by a specially trained staff of interviewers under the direction of Henry C. Durant, British economist and lecturer. The British Institute has been in existence for nearly four years, and its reports are currently published exclusively by the London "News Chronicle."

Cold Spell Stops At 4 Above Zero; Milder Tomorrow

Fair Weather Forecast for Tonight, Saturday; 18 Above Today

The thermometer slipped down to four above zero at 4 o'clock this morning in the city but inhabitants weren't impressed by the "cold wave" that was predicted for this area.

A little snow fell this morning but the gray clouds thinned steadily, the sun came out, and the mercury began pointing upward, reaching 18 above zero at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

For tonight and Saturday, a fair weather forecast is the forecast for Appleton. The state in general, said today, is the Milwaukee bureau. Yesterday's low was 27 below zero.

Forecasters at the bureau were chilled by sub-zero weather today, but present high was in sight, the Associated Press said.

Forecasters Gordon F. Dunn said morning would be rapid today and tomorrow in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. Fair readings in those states this morning included -27 at Bemis, Minn.; -29 at Sioux Falls, S. D.; and -44 at Park Falls, Wis.

Dunn said a 6 below reading at Sioux City, Iowa, was taken at 6:30 a. m. An hour later the temperature had fallen to 11 below.

The heaviest snowfall of the past 24 hours centered at Des Moines, Iowa, where it measured about six inches. Light falls occurred in extreme southeastern Nebraska, southern and eastern Iowa, northern Missouri, extreme northern Illinois and Indiana, southern Michigan and along the Great Lakes shores.

Order New Reports On 2 State Harbors

Washington—Army engineers ordered the Cleveland division yesterday to prepare new reports on requested harbor improvements at Bayfield and Ashland in Wisconsin.

The field investigation was assigned to Lieutenant Colonel Zenophor Price, district engineer at Duluth, Minn.

He was ordered to determine whether any changes in a report submitted on Bayfield harbor Jan. 18, 1932, would be advisable. Previously army engineers declared construction of a breakwater would be "too costly to make it economically feasible."

At the request of local interests for a deeper channel in the Ashland harbor, the army engineers ordered Price to review previous reports to determine if it would be advisable to modify the existing project now.

Be A Careful Driver

See all the conditions in all the countries. He said Welles would be in Europe only long enough to visit the four countries. Asked whether he would visit Chancellor Hitler, the president said he did not know. To a question whether he had advised congress of the move, Mr. Roosevelt replied that it was purely a matter for himself and Secretary Hull.

The president told the reporters that Welles would carry no message from him nor would a staff accompany him.

When someone inquired whether Welles would discuss with European leaders any peace plan the president might have in mind, Mr. Roosevelt sharply told the questioner not to get didactic. He added that he did not know whom Welles would see, what he would say, or what the government officials would say to him.

It Is Said--

The advancement of seven boys to the rank of Eagle scout, highest scale in scouting, has done more for Troop 11 of McKinley Junior High school than give it publicity. Seems that since the awards were made, several former members of the troop who have grown away from their activities have expressed a desire to resume work leading to the Eagle badge.

An irate taxpayer, to prove that he cuts his own weeds, brought his scythe along with him when he came to city hall Wednesday to protest an assessment against him for weed cutting. A check of the records revealed that no charge had been made against the scythe-wielder for weed cutting but a charge had been made for snow shoveling. Officials said his protest was legitimate but he should have brought a snow shovel to city hall.

Besides the fact that he is from Costa Rica, Omar Denzo, Lawrence college freshman, has distinguished himself on the campus with his caustically accurate caricatures of members of the faculty.

It's getting so that students and faculty members alike skip the front page and the sports section of the Lawrenceton, college weekly, to find out right away what professor gets his this week. From the professor's angle, there's little you can do about it—except laugh at the picture of your colleague.

Victor P. Schmidt, Walter G. Anderson Get Nomination Papers

Two more candidates entered the race for the city clerk's position today making five now seeking the nomination in the primary election March 12.

The new candidates are Victor P. Schmidt, 929 N. Owassa street, and Walter G. Anderson, 823 W. Lorain street. Nomination papers were taken out this morning for both men.

The position will be vacated by Carl J. Becher, city clerk, May 1. Becher announced Wednesday he would not be a candidate for the post because of his accounting business.

Miss Dorothea Leisinger, deputy city clerk for the last six years, is a candidate along with Elmer D. Scott, 227 W. Pacific street, and George Wood, 513 N. Bateman street.

Nomination papers also were taken out today for Alderman E. P. Grignon, council representative in the Tenth ward. Grignon is finishing his second term as alderman.

President Says Total Debt In Country Over 3 Billion Lower Than It Was in 1932

Washington — President Roosevelt asserted today that the total debt in this country, including federal, state, local and private, had gone down between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000 since 1932, while the population had increased 6 or 7 per cent.

Discussing the debt situation at a press conference, he elaborated on his discussion of the same question at a Hyde Park, N. Y., conference Monday.

Following the Monday statement Thomas E. Dewey, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, took issue with Mr. Roosevelt.

Dewey said a report by the agricultural adjustment administration showed that state and local debts had declined only $130,000,000 since 1932, that private debt fell $17,500,000,000, and that total federal government debt increased "nearly $26,500,000,000."

Therefore, Dewey declared, "the grand total of government and private debt advanced from $148,000,000,000 in 1932 to $157,810,000,000 in 1939."

"Thus," he concluded, "the total increase in all debt was $9,000,000,000."

Mr. Roosevelt said today he had checked up on his Hyde Park figures, furnished by Lauchlin Currie, a White House assistant, and that the record showed he linked private debt in his summary because he thought this should be included.

Asked about the agricultural adjustment administration report, which Dewey used, Mr. Roosevelt said that report contained many duplications.

The fact is, he said, that while the population had gone up in the last seven years by 6 or 7 per cent the total debt of the United States was lower. Currie, who sat on a divan at today's press conference, gave the figure, which the president repeated, that the debt was less by from $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000.

Asks City to Pay for Dumping Snow on Land

Louis Poppakostas, owner of part of the ravine on College avenue at Division street, in a letter to the city council yesterday asked the city to pay the amount of the taxes on the property as rental for dumping snow there. He claimed remuneration over the last six years amounting to $846.75, the amount of taxes over the period. A similar claim has been received from Anton Stadler, owner of the remainder of the ravine.

Put Up Posters for First Showing of Film

Posters advertising the premiere showing of "When Traffic Moves," the city's new pedestrian safety picture, are being distributed about the city. The picture will be shown to the general public for the first time Monday evening, Feb. 19, at the senior high school auditorium. Music will be furnished by the Appleton High school orchestra under the direction of Jay I. Williams.

MATHEMATICS CLUB WORKS ON BLACKBOARD PUZZLE

The Mathematics club of Roosevelt Junior High school was interested in the problem, shown on the blackboard, when an Appleton Post-Crescent photographer dropped in on a recent club meeting. The puzzle goes like this: A man goes to a carnival and attends four concessions each costing a dollar to get in and a dollar to get out. At each concession he spends half of the money he has left. If he comes out without any money, how much did he have to start? Left to right in the picture are Vera Radtke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Radtke, 1507 N. Appleton street; Carl Van Ryzin, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Van Ryzin, Sr., 500 E. Roosevelt street; Robert DeWet, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. R. DeWet, 738 E. Franklin street; and Sylvia Koehn, daughter of Mrs. Anna Koehn, 820 E. Washington street. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Lenten Thought For Today

Friday, Feb. 9. Finally brethren . . . think on these things. Read Philippians 4:4-8

St. Paul's list of "these things" shines like stars, what is true, worthy, lovely, kindly, excellent, praiseworthy. Kept in mind they would make thinking a joy, realized in action they would transform our world.

Our minds are just now not much considered as our most divine possession. We are told to guard against their tricks, distrust their conclusions and dig in the dark and the mine for their roots.

The recovery of the idiosyncrasy of right-mindedness will be our first step toward the good life and a sane world.

The regions over which we now seem to have personal control are tragically limited. But we still have our own minds, assailed, confused, but sanctuaries and powers. Lent recalls us to these sanctuaries, not for escape, but for re-empowerment.

Every one of "these things" has its issue in action, blessed and far-reaching. They are in desperate danger of being lost unless they are kept in mind. Kept there they will endure all shocks and storms and find their day again. That is our Lenten task.

Prayer: O Merciful Father, who in compassion for Thy sinful children didst send Thy Son, Jesus Christ, to be the Saviour of the World, help us by self-denial, prayer and meditation to prepare our hearts and our world for deeper penitence and a better life. In Jesus' Name. Amen

Naming of Editor for Weekly Before Board

The board of control of the Lawrentian, Lawrence college paper, was scheduled to name a new editor at a meeting this afternoon, following the recent resignation of Jack White of Chicago. Applications for the position as editor of the campus weekly were to have been submitted by noon today.

Clerk Urges Voters To Register Names For Primary Polling

The deadline for registration of voters for the primary election is March 2, 10 days before election. Carl J. Becher, city clerk, reminded voters today.

A chance in the election laws this year will make it impossible to vote by affidavit on election day and the clerk urged those who wish to vote in the primary to register their names at his office before the deadline.

Changes of address since the last election also should be recorded at the clerk's office before the polling lists are completed. Nomination papers for candidates must be filed by Feb. 21.

Hike Capital Stock Of Tobacco Company

Capital stock of the P. and J. Tobacco company, Appleton, has been increased from $50,000 to $75,000, according to an amendment to the articles of organization filed with Stephen M. Peeters, Outagamie county register of deeds. The amendment is signed by Abe Polisky, president, and Max Polisky, secretary.

TIES SELF UP Marble Rock, Iowa

Jack Weise, 11, who wants to be a boy scout, got all tied up in this one today.

Practicing knots, he tied himself so tightly to a chair he had to knock a telephone receiver off the hook and summon aid to get loose.

January Outlay Is $28,522, $218 Over Preceding Month

The January outlay for blind and old age pensions and aid to dependent children was $28,522.95, an increase of $218.15 over December, according to a report of T. S. Davis, county pension director.

A total of $17,411.95, an increase of $75.85 over December, was spent for old age pensions. During the month 14 cases were added and 8 dropped, leaving a total of 862.

Aid to dependent children during the month amounted to $9,883, an increase of $107.55 over the preceding month. There were 313 cases at the end of the month, 6 being added and 2 dropped during the period.

Blind pensions totaled $1,223.25 in January, an increase of $33.75 over December. Fifty cases were on the list at the beginning of the month with one added during the period.

A LOT LOWER PRICED THAN MOST PEOPLE THINK!

9 OUT OF 10

A recent national survey shows 9 out of 10 people think a Pontiac costs an average of $100 more than it actually does in relation to lower-priced cars. Don't let this mistaken idea keep you from investigating Pontiac. Don't let any low priced car until you compare its price with a Pontiac. The slight difference will amaze you.

HERE'S WHY SO MANY THINK PONTIAC HIGHER PRICED THAN IT ACTUALLY IS!

BIG CAR DIMENSIONS AND APPEARANCE

Add a few dollars to the price of the lowest priced cars and get a big Pontiac, 4 inches wider at front seat, 8 1/2 inches longer from bumper to bumper than last year's.

THE "TRIPLE-CUSHIONED" RIDE

Do you get car weary on long trips? Get a Pontiac and relax. Pontiac's "Triple-Cushioned" ride is worth all the slight difference between Pontiac and lower-priced cars.

EXQUISITE, WIDE-VISIONED INTERIORS

Ever wish your car were larger? It's a few extra dollars and get a Pontiac. It's wider-seated, wider-cushioned with its Test Safety Plate Glass in all sedans.

THRILL PERFORMANCE

You only have to go to the first traffic light to sample the thrill performance in Pontiac's power-packed engine.

IT IS DIFFICULT to make people realize that Pontiac is priced just a few dollars above the lowest.

They simply haven't been accustomed to associating low price with a car that has the reputation, looks, size, luxury and performance of cars costing up to several hundred dollars higher.

Come in and take a look at this sensational new money's-worth of motor car. See how much bigger and roomier it is. And don't leave without trying its new "Triple-Cushioned" ride and the flashing performance of its power-packed Pontiac engine.

For the best ride on four wheels and the best miles of your life, get a 1940 Pontiac!

Help promote Safety... Dim your lights when passing

UNDERPRIVILEGED OR PRIVILEGED

The outstanding tribute paid the University of Wisconsin on Founders' Day was an undervalued statement in the address by Dean Frank Holt of the extension division in which he stated that 30 per cent of the university's students are wholly self-supporting, that another 30 per cent are one-half or more self-supporting and a large proportion of the remainder are partially self-supporting.

These figures are not only testimony to the fact that the university is highly democratic, but also to the fact that a good proportion of the students at Madison are there for real work.

It wasn't many years ago, in the Joe College era of the prosperity years, when Wisconsin had a reputation among the college set as the "country club" of the West. Young men and women whose aim in college was mainly to have a good time picked Madison as their alma mater for obvious reasons.

Dean Holt's statement seems to prove that this reputation is no longer deserved, and that it is a small minority of students who give the university today any flavor of the play-boy college.

Educators in general and some parents are gradually coming to the idea that young men and women can best start to learn how to work for a living in college instead of spending their four years there learning how to play. The shock of graduating into a society where most members must earn their daily bread or starve is too great if it is forced on a young man or woman suddenly and without any preparation along with his or her diploma.

The old theory, that students in college should have all the money they want and all the leisure time too because it is their last opportunity to blow themselves to a good time, came from that over-worked philosophy in American life that "give my children what I couldn't afford."

It originated with the successful businessman who had hoisted himself up in the world by his own bootstraps and then promptly forgot that his growing son would have to learn something of the same self-discipline in order to himself be a success.

It is one of the marvels of America that the underprivileged often have the advantage over the privileged in a life where vigorous competition is the sifter of the wheat from the chaff.

Providing the work is not so great as to harm a young man or young woman physically, it never hurt any maturing student to learn while he was still in college the value of money in light of the work which must be expended to earn it.

THEY ARE ALWAYS WITH US
Prof. Morton of the state university issues a paper under the auspices of the municipal league which gets a lot of attention and surprised comment because of its thesis that the sales tax applies a lesser burden to the low income group than the traditional property tax system.

While it surprised many, upon reconsideration it is not surprising at all. It simply bolsters what all of us have been saying, without much avail, for years, that changes in the property tax structure will have to be made soon because property owners feel that their assessments are more than they can bear.

The real point in Prof. Morton's paper is the comparison between the property tax and the sales tax. The property tax has always been with us here. The sales tax, at least the general sales tax, has not yet been introduced, mostly because the legislature shows an occasional respect for the people's wishes. While acceding the justice of supporting most of our governmental services through assessments on property the people have opposed another form of regressive taxation, the sales tax, without ever comparing the two.

While the professor makes a valuable point by showing us a comparison which had not previously been developed, it would be a mistake to assume that the sales tax should be a substitute for the property tax. Both are harshly regressive. The same student of the problem warns that it will require a levy of at least 12 per cent on all sales to completely replace the property tax system, a rate manifestly impossible.

Dr. Morton's study is a valuable one in that it shows us the need for a more realistic and thorough study of our tax system. It emphasizes the need for a non-partisan, scientific investigation of our multifarious taxation schedules and bases, and the possibility of redistributing the load. There are now too many contradictions in public financing. Sooner or later we must install some sanity.

PATIENCE UNTIL AFTER ELECTION

Sir Frederick Whyte has become impatient over British impatience at America's apparent determination to abstain from war.

Sir Frederick, who is director of the American division of the British information ministry, went so far in a lecture at Oxford as to roundly rebuke the Englishmen who have strained their eyes westward looking for the American navy and troop ships. The speaker argued that since American sympathies are certainly with the English and French time may be expected to work its usual wonders. The speaker was considerably disturbed in fear that the sharp lashings released by tongue and press might anger America instead of whipping it into the fray.

Among other things Sir Frederick said: "The neutrality act showed where America's sympathies lay. The instinct of isolation in America is still deep rooted. The change desired by President Roosevelt may be slow in coming. Considering the vehemence of the American temperament, it is not inconceivable that these sympathies may one day sweep America into the crusade which today she shuns."

It is evident that the English, had they anything to say about it, would support the President for a third term and that their hope is in Mr. Roosevelt turning the American people again to the sodden battlefields.

If Europe can have two World wars in 25 years why cannot America have two elections in which it decides to stay out of war and then immediately enters it?

MR. PEGLER SMITES TOOTH AND NAIL

Mr. Pegler is the national iconoclast. Blithely and lustily he swings a great mallet of scorn against crumbly clay figures and the pretensions for which they stand.

His impartial attacks against clearly vulnerable spots in both C.I.O. and A.F.L. practices may help those within the ranks, and who detest the sores as much as he, to eradicate them. But it is sheer error to hold any organization up to an entirely artificial standard in any respect.

Mr. Lewis, for instance, did not accept the help of the wild men, who call themselves Reds in private, because he thought well of them but because he believed they could carry his burning ambition to control the labor movement in America in to the flowering stage. Mr. Lewis is neither cool-headed nor sound in his conclusions. The rulers of the A.F.L. are much more clever even conceding they have certain faults that protrude. They had the steadiness of character to let the gusts of dusty wind that blew down the street go unnoticed. Flighty actions were not going to materially affect the millions though they might turn the heads of the thoughtless minority.

Probably, too, if the A.F.L. had the C.I.O. off its back it could turn very resolutely to long neglected internal affairs like that of Bioff and Seale and wash its mouth with soap.

But Mr. Pegler carries no friendly banner for those caught in the shadows holding hands with the unclean. He employs but two prescriptions, carbolic acid and mustard gas, and so far as he is concerned the patient may take his choice.

And that is necessary in an iconoclast.

REDISCOVERING AMERICA

Prof. Samuel E. Morison of Harvard rises to dispute the eminent debunkers who have been saying Columbus was a fake, a poor seaman, inaccurate in his records and a braggart. Professor Morison has just returned from a trip during which he and other members of the Harvard Columbus expedition spent four months following the routes of the voyages made by Columbus more than four centuries ago.

The expedition sought to identify the courses and landfalls mentioned in the logs of Columbus and in notes left by him and his son, and sailed the route from Cadiz to Madeira, the Canaries, Trinidad and along the shores of Central America. The Harvard voyagers went everywhere that Columbus went, following in the wake of his ship on water and even landing wherever he did.

The trip, according to Professor Morison confirmed the records of the great discoverer in their entirety. "We came back with the conviction Columbus was a very fine seaman. . . . He was not much on celestial navigation but good on dead reckoning."

Even the disputed claim of Columbus to sighting the three hills of Tobago as he came out of Trinidad was verified. Learned dissenters had worked it out mathematically that Tobago could not be seen from the point Columbus reported, but the Harvard crew saw the hills from that very spot.

Harvard university is to be commended for sponsoring this expedition and nearly everyone, except perhaps the distinguished debunkers, will welcome this confirmation of the accuracy of the log of Columbus. Yet, it is doubtful that even if the expedition had never been made the thrilling story of Columbus would have lost any of its fascination. The debunkers could avail little against so great an adventure as that of the man who believed the world was round when all others thought it was flat.

Like many Dutch housewives, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands has a horror of waste and conducts her home on simple and economical lines.

THE DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN
Washington—Most popular but most pathetic pastime of Washington society these days is raising money for Finland. Distinguished and well-meaning ladies hold afternoon teas and dinner parties at which the problem of Finnish relief is discussed and dissected fore and aft.

There have been, for instance, the parties given by those very charming and delightful ladies, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the former Governor of Pennsylvania, and Virginia Bacon, wife of the late congressman from New York.

At these, every phase of relief for Finland is threshed out—whether it is wise politics for the Republicans to vote money for Finland, whether the money should be raised as a bond issue, whether more money should be advanced by the Export-Import bank, whether Herbert Hoover is really the right man to head the relief drive.

Meanwhile Hjalmar Procope, distraught minister of Finland, sits and listens. He is polite, but it is easy to see that while this conversation rages he is thinking of anti-aircraft guns and airplanes and how many weeks more his country can last.

It is like discussing an elaborate dinner menu for a starving man who would be satisfied with a loaf of bread, if he could only get it immediately.

Finally the Finnish minister is called upon to speak. His voice breaks, the tears stream down his face, the meeting adjourns. The ladies have had their emotional spree, but little has been accomplished for Finland.

DESPERATE FINNS
Meanwhile the Finns, worried over the fact that their cause in America has got into the hands of high society, are considering a money-raising campaign of their own. They fear that too many horse-shows and high-hat festivals have removed them from the ken of the man in the street.

So the Finns have been discussing with such students of human psychology as Ted Clarke and Steve Hannagan the idea of a popular drive to raise money for Finland. Under this plan, American families would be asked to save Finnish families by donating anything up to $10—and in return receive the blue cross of Finland to hang in their windows.

Note—Confidential intelligence dispatches report that Finland's condition becomes daily worse. Troops are exhausted. There are almost no replacements. It may be a matter of weeks.

CAPITAL CHAFF
A group of Protestant preachers will soon appeal to the Apostolic Delegate in Washington to ask the Catholic church to curb the Christian Front and Father Coughlin. The plea will be made on the grounds of religious tolerance. . . . Washington zoo-keepers are watching the elephant which swallowed the blue mitten belonging to little Ellen Be Grifffen of Arizona. So far he elephant's tummy has seemed equal to the digestive task. . . . Official Washington agrees that "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" is one of the most stirring motion picture spectacles even shown in the capital.

FDR'S CIGARETTE HOLDER
The president got one birthday present he wasn't expecting—a new cigarette holder. The gift was on Representative Jack Nichols of Oklahoma, who is still a little bewildered as to how it happened.

It was Nichols who presented to Roosevelt the movie stars who participated in the Birthday Balls. While making the introductions, he kept gesturing with a long, aluminum cigarette holder he had just bought.

Roosevelt is a great fancier of cigarette holders, and this one took his eye.

"That's a mighty classy holder you have there, Jack," he remarked. "Where'd you get it?"

"Over here at a drug store," replied Nichols. "Isn't it a nifty? It set me back three dollars, but it's worth every cent of it. Guaranteed to extract the nicotine or your money back. You ought to get yourself one."

"I believe I will," said Roosevelt, and suiting action to words, he plucked the holder out of Nichols' hand and nonchalantly put it in his pocket.

V-P BOOMLETS
The only thing accomplished at that "secret" Chicago meeting of state GOP chairmen from 10 Midwestern states was the polishing up of a number of vice-presidential boomlets.

With the exception of Ohio, where Senator Taft is the recognized favorite son candidate, the politicians agreed to blackout such aspirants in their states in order to go to the national convention with free hands to operate as a powerful midwestern bloc. But for vice president they left the door wide open, and the result was a number of boomlets.

South Dakota trotted out Governor Harlan Bushfield, who has been making headlines with a drive on alleged highway grafters. North Dakota put in a big plug for Sanford McNider, Minister to Canada under Hoover, although leaders from his own state, Iowa, talked Governor George Wilson. Minnesota plumped for young Governor Harold Stassen, although sentiment among GOP chiefs there is in favor of letting him "ripen" a while for a future presidential race.

Real originator of the meeting, incidentally, was Homer Capehart, millionaire Indiana nickelodeon maker who staged the $30,000 "cornfield" rally in 1938 and got himself $100,000 worth of free advertising. Capehart suggested to Illinois State Chairman A. K. Stiles that it would be a nice idea to "honor" state party officials, and he sent out the invitations with a note that it would be a private gathering. But someone in Michigan tipped off the Vandenberg camp, and fearing it was a Dewey or Taft maneuver, they leaked the "secret" to the press.

MERRY-GO-ROUND
Charley Broughton, Democratic national committeeman from Wisconsin, has made it clear to big-shot Washington politicians that Wisconsin will come to the Chicago convention 100 per cent Roosevelt. . . . Word that Roosevelt is looking for a good vacation fishing area has brought a flood of suggestions to the White house. One of them, from Nelson Poynter of the St. Petersburg Times, urges that the president make "his long delayed visit to west coast Florida. Rube Allen, Times fishing editor and the best in Florida, says these waters will be fine in a week or two. . . . The American Labor party, which swings the balance of power in New York city, has decided to stick together only if Roosevelt runs for a third term. Otherwise it won't. . . . GOP floor leader Joe Martin was being thanked by a newsmen for posing with him for a promotion photograph. "Don't mention it," replied Martin, "I hope it gets you a raise."

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

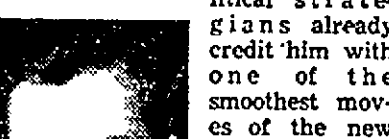

IN MEMORY

The glory of a thousand kindly deeds
Shone in his heaven, lighting his last hour.
Always he thought about his children's needs;
And his unselfishness had healing power.
To ease the journey. When the mists grew deep,
He murmured "Beautiful!" and fell asleep.
Goodness and truth adorned his days, and now
That he has gone there is no memory
Save beauty. There was peace upon his brow
For his day ended with tranquillity.
In life, in death, no dark thought came to mar
His radiant ever-ascending star.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington — Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi never will be the hero of a Finnish epic but political strategians already credit him with one of the smoothest moves of the new year in tossing back to the Administration the hot potato of the Finnish loan.

Harrison's plan, which he announced to a press conference on the eve of a meeting of the foreign relations committee, was simple. Let the government keep its hands out of the business of making loans to the Finns. Since the idea for a loan is a popular one, let a popular loan be floated. Then sympathizers can invest as much as they please in Finnish bonds. The government will not be involved in a matter of troublesome foreign policy.

Privately members of congress have growled a bit at the Administration for putting the Finnish loan baby in their laps during an election year. With equal candor they insist the President was glad to be rid of it after having handled it to the extent of a $10,000,000 loan through the Export-Import bank.

Members of Congress are almost 100 per cent sympathetic with the Finnish cause. Harrison is among them. But he shares the view of the others that a U. S. loan to Finland would set a precedent that would be hard to step around, even though Finland is in a special position because of having kept up payments on her debts.

Harrison could not conceal a glint of humor in his eye when he suggested that an issue of Finnish bonds would be first passed upon by the Securities and Exchange commission. That would be tossing the hot potato right back to the Administration in fine style. The SEC couldn't avoid the obligation of telling purchasers of the bonds that, win or lose, Finland would be hard-pressed to make return payments.

Rightly, Harrison suggested that if the bonds should prove worthless in the end, "it is a deductible item in income tax returns."

Jolt to Weather Service
The war has knocked one happy feature of the U. S. weather reporting service into a cocked hat. The Coast Guard is filling in the breach by sending a pair of reporting ships into the south central Atlantic.

Over a period of years the weather bureau has received from ships at sea, both American and foreign, a report of ocean weather. It has come in from every spot in the ocean where a ship with a good radio happened to be.

Four times a day at 1:30 and 7:30 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time, morning and night, the ships would report to U. S. receiving stations. Quickly a world weather map would be drawn. Then at 3 and 9 o'clock, morning and night — just an hour and a half after each report — a weather message would be broadcast worldwide over the naval radio station at Arlington, just across the river from Washington.

It was a splendid service, and the maritime commerce of the world benefited by it.

Then came the war. American ships continued to send in weather reports four times a day but no ship belonging to a belligerent nation and few belonging to neutral nations would report. For a ship to broadcast its location and the kind of weather thereabouts would have made it dead meat for a submarine.

Since much American traffic has shifted lately to the South Atlantic lanes, the Coast Guard is establishing two reporting ships there. One will be a third of the way from Bermuda to the Azores, the other two-thirds of the way. Their reports will be particularly valuable to the trans-Atlantic air service which now uses only the southern route.

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO
Friday, Feb. 7, 1930

Frank J. Schneller, Neenah, was attending the convention of the National Rifle Association at Washington, D. C., that week.

The fourteenth annual tournament of the Wisconsin Knights of Columbus bowling association was to be held at Elks club alleys beginning Saturday and continuing through March 30. Tournament officers were Henry N. Marx, president; J. N. Schneider, vice president; and Lawrence Schreier, secretary and treasurer.

An opening dinner for the New London Community hospital campaign was to be held the following Thursday evening at Werner hall, New London. It was announced by R. J. McMahon, general chairman.

25 YEARS AGO
Friday, Feb. 12, 1915

A site for Camp Olympia, the new summer camp for girls to be organized the following summer at Lake Winnepigosis by the Misses Ruth and Louise Patterson, had been definitely selected. A cottage, a half mile beyond Lechurst, together with seven adjoining acres of land, had been leased.

Attorney A. M. Spencer that day announced his candidacy for the position of municipal judge of Outagamie county. He previously had served as city and district attorney.

George Pansy, 924 Richmond street, was killed that morning when he was buried in a land slide in the gravel pit at William Kohl's farm on the School Section road. A new band stand was to be erected in the city park, plans for which were to be drawn by high school students in a contest to be conducted by Dr. J. R. Scott, park commissioner.

Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, is said to be the oldest French town in the United States.

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—As everybody expected, Governor Heil is reaping a storm of abuse and criticism for his stand on the oleomargarine tax. The governor is inexperienced in politics, but experience, be it in politics or in anything else, is not gained by reading the newspapers and listening to occasional campaign speeches in late years wasn't necessary for a knowledge that his forthright proposition to repeal the tax would make the economy cloy and his own friends worry. Therefore the governor's position is either courageous or reckless, depending on your point of view.

Politicians generally have earned a reputation for glib insincerity, for a faculty for making promises which are easily forgotten after the ballots are counted, for subordinating principle to vote-getting. One of the best examples of how that reputation was earned is present in the debates over the oleo-margarine tax. On that issue alone there is more sophistry than any other agitating public discussions in the state today.

BAD, BUT
Time without number this reporter and others have discussed with politicians in the legislature and out in the state the question of the oleo-margarine tax and others of current public interest. Time and time again politicians have confided that they don't believe in the tax—but, the farmer does, and the farmer controls elections in a good many Wisconsin districts. Some excused themselves with the theory that they are supposed to represent the will of their constituents—implying that a politician can have no will of his own—others wave aside the problem vaguely with a "that's politics."

NEAT PROBLEM
But the fact remains. Politics is politics in Wisconsin, and Governor Heil has presented himself with a neat political problem by unequivocally calling for repeal. He can hardly change his mind now, after declaring himself publicly several times, without making that political problem even worse. From now on we can expect that oleo is going to be spread thick in political speeches of the Heil opposition, and particularly the gleeful Progressives who have been waiting for just such a chance.

There haven't been very many hot issues presented by the Heil administration. Every good political worker will concede that it is hard to wage a red-hot campaign on such a stodgy issue as the state budget, which few of them understand well enough to discuss authoritatively anyway. Besides, the condition of state finances is such that the figures can be turned to whatever point of view the speaker happens to be taking.

A NATURAL
The oleo issue is a natural, one contributed gratuitously by an administration head who has a habit of speaking what he thinks, and sometimes some of his friends relate, before he thinks. During the next few months Progressives will come forward to claim the oleo-margarine tax as their own—a claim not strictly true—and point to Heil and the Republicans as the boys who want to destroy one of the state laws enacted for the farmers' particular benefit. The important thing is that the Progressives then will have an issue of board appeal, for no close observer of state politics in recent years can doubt that a rural referendum would overwhelmingly defeat Heil's proposal to repeal the oleo impost.

Personal Health Talks

SUGAR SHORTAGE

Diagnosis of true diabetes rests not upon the presence of sugar in the urine but upon the simultaneous presence of too much sugar in the blood—that is, more than 14 mg. per 100 cc. of blood (0.14 per cent) when the patient is fasting, or more than 17 mg. per 100cc. (0.17 per cent) when the patient has had a meal.

In a healthy person there is constantly a certain amount of sugar in the blood, averaging 0.10 per cent after a night's fast, up to 0.14 or 0.15 per cent after a hearty meal or after indulgence in candy, ice cream or other sugars or starches. There is only a rounded teaspoonful of sugar in the entire blood stream, but let the amount present fall ever so little below the level indicated, and you'll feel extraordinarily let down or you may even behave as the drunk and disorderly. In some cases where there is more than the normal amount of sugar in the blood (not necessarily diabetes) a similar condition occurs if the blood sugar level falls only to what is normal for most persons.

Apart from the treatment of diabetes with insulin hypoglycemia occurs in many instances where the nature of the spell is perhaps unrecognized, although physicians are becoming more adept in the diagnosis of functional disturbances and in the medical journals all aspects of hypoglycemia in non-diabetic individuals are discussed by physicians who have the means and opportunity to study the problem. If measurement of the blood sugar level were more or less routine in the general examination, as is measurement of the sugar in the urine, no doubt hypoglycemia would be found as the source and explanation for many otherwise inexplicable spells or lapses from normal behavior.

Probably the mildest and commonest manifestation of hypoglycemia is a rather abrupt change in the victim's manner and disposition from cheerful and agreeable to quiet, apathetic, morose or surly or from even tempered and easy going to impatient and crabbed.

In more pronounced lowering of the blood sugar the individual is hungry but doesn't know it. He feels strangely weak or shaky, vaguely afraid of he doesn't know what, has a tremor in the hands, moisture in the palms, even a few beads of sweat on the forehead, with some mental confusion or daze.

In still more serious instances lowering in the blood sugar level brings irrational, even violent conduct, alarming collapse, unconsciousness, even convulsions. In any case the remedy is food, preferably sugar in some form, but almost any kind of food immediately available will quickly relieve and generally completely restore normalcy.

Over-Estimation of Child May Prove to be Handicap

BY DOROTHY DIX

One of the strangest, sweetest, and most tragic things in the world is the provision of nature that enables mothers to see their children as they wish them to be and not as they are. Never by any chance do they hatch out an ugly duckling. Their broods are all swans. To the casual eye the red and wrinkled little infant in the crook of its mother's arm may hardly look human, but to the mother it is the noblest work of God. She sees in it ineffable beauty and intelligence, and spends the days of her convalescence trying to decide whether he shall be president or commander-in-chief of the army.

It is because mother perceives future Miss Americas in their snub-nosed, toothy, spindly little daughters; trust magnates and writers of best-sellers and Ministers Plenipotentiary and Ambassadors Extraordinary in their dumb sons who barely scrape through grammar school that keeps the population of the world going. Otherwise most of us would have been drowned at birth, like so many unassuming pups. Nobody but Mother would have thought us worth rearing. And that is what makes us want both to laugh and cry when we listen to mothers boasting about their offspring.

If mothers' overestimation of the talents of their children is sometimes a good that drives them on to success, it is just as often the handicap that makes them failures. For mother has made her children think more highly of themselves than they deserve and they are not willing to do the work for which their ability fitted them or to occupy the humble seats that they rate. And so they make up the army of the frustrated who are filled with bitterness and unhappiness of their mothers' making.

A young woman, whose mother suffers from an obsession of having brought forth a family of world-beaters, writes:

"My mother is one of the best, most devoted and self-sacrificing mothers who ever lived; the kind of a mother who would die for her children and has saved all of her lives for them. But she is wrecking us by her delusion that we are geniuses, when we are just plain, common people without anything extraordinary about us.

"My older sister, for instance, is just a nice, pretty girl, nobody you would notice twice in a crowd; but from her infancy up Mother has done nothing but rave about her beauty, her charm, her glamor, and she has actually believed that there was no ancient or modern siren who could compare with her.

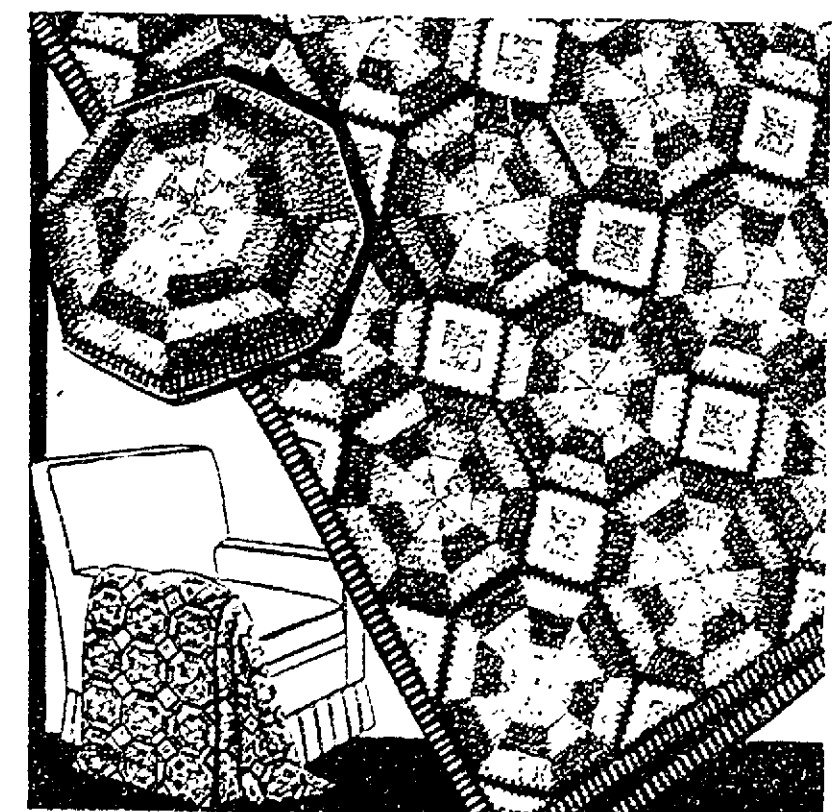

"Naturally, Mother was sure that such a ravishing beauty would make a brilliant match, a millionaire at least, with high social connections. So she drove away all the nice young chaps on a salary who would have given sister a good time, and sister was pretty lonely sitting around home with nobody but Mother to tell her how beautiful she was until she got acquainted with a young butcher and married him. He is a grand husband, it is true, but she is a happy as you please, but Mother never has forgiven her and she is always wallowing about sister, throwing all that beauty away on a mere tradesman.

"And there is my brother, a nice, industrious boy who never did much at school, but he is a wizard with all sorts of machinery and his burning desire is to be an automobile mechanic and have a garage of his own. But Mother is determined to make a lawyer of him, as she sees in him nothing less than the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

"And she is forcing me to go through college, although she can't afford it and has to make terrible sacrifices to do it, because she is convinced I am intellectual when I am nothing of the sort. I am domestic. To me a cookbook is more fascinating reading than a novel. I get more of a kick out of looking at new household gadgets than I do out of a fashion show or a jeweler's display. I want to go to a domestic science school and develop my only talent, which is for cooking, and my ambition is to have my own little hotel some time. But nothing doing. Mother can't see me as any one but Pearl Buck or Ida Tarbell!"

Poor girl and poor mother. Poor mother, who must see her dreams for her children unfulfilled, and poor children, who must be sacrificed to a mother's delusion. For there can be no doubt that mother blindness is responsible for many blighted lives. Mothers will not see their children as they are, and so they are denied the help they might have been given. They were not trained to do the thing they could have done and they failed at it.

Cooperation Life Blood Of Defense

BY ELY CULBERTSON

It is a common occurrence for two defenders to have radically different ideas as to the proper line of defense against a given contract. Smooth cooperation being the very life blood of defensive play, it is essential that one of them abandon his own idea and do his best to further partner's in order to avoid discord that is bound to be very helpful to the enemy. In today's hand West went blithely on his way as though he had no partner. The result was what might have been expected.

The bidding:
South 1 diamond
West 1 heart
North 1 no trump
East Pass

North's free bid of one no trump was a trifle shaded but not really bad. East's double was certainly persuasive, as was South's redouble. West opened the king of hearts and, although his partner followed with the deuce, the ace was laid down and a third round led. East suspected that this line of defense was wrong (that declarer also was now out of hearts) and tried to protect himself by ruffing with the diamond ten but the declarer was too shrewd. He overruffed the ten, cashed the trump ace, led the seven of clubs to dummy's jack and finessed against the jack of trumps. The finesse succeeding, he now ran off every trump, leaving himself with the jack of spades and the 9-10 of clubs. Dummy kept the 7-8-9 of clubs and poor East was hopelessly squeezed, being faced either to unguard dummy's club suit or to throw away the spade ace, which would promote South's spade jack to winning rank.

West was criminally stubborn in not following his partner's direction, as conveyed by the deuce and jack of hearts. East had doubled the final contract and should certainly have been given credit for knowing whether or not he wanted to ruff a third round of hearts. West's duty was to shift leads, and consideration of the dummy in connection with his own hand would have dictated a shift to spades rather than clubs. This would have defeated the redoubled game contract.

neral. I thought this very disrespectful especially since the mother-in-law had lived right on her same street.

Answer: The old stage saying that "the play must go on" is equally true of all professions. If the daughter-in-law would have inconvenienced no one by staying away, then of course I agree with you. But to have stayed away and let some one else do her work would have been to consider her own feelings at unfair expense to whoever had to take over her part. If a business woman loses her husband, or her own mother, or other member of her immediate family, even then she sometimes has to go on as normally as possible, although there would be far greater excuse for her failure to put consideration for others above her own feelings. Had this daughter-in-law gone about amusing herself, that would have been a very different situation.

Polite Serving Manners
Dear Mrs. Post: Do you think it sounds polite for a waitress to say "Coffee?" and nothing else when offering more coffee? I think it sounds too abrupt but I have been told to say this.

Answer: It is much more polite to say "Coffee, Madam?" (or sir) or even "More Coffee, Madam?" (or sir). (The use of "more" in this case, where the second serving is obvious, is not wrong.)

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "The Three Types of Table Service." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post in care of this paper, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y.

To remove fingermarks from wall paper, rub the marks with a gum eraser or with soft bread until the marks disappear. Watch for signs of these stains and remove them promptly. For grease stains, try covering them with talcum powder or cake magnesia. Rub off with a clean brush after a day or so.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

Sun lotions like OLYMPE BRADNA take every precaution to protect their skin from the sun. They also believe in meticulous leg grooming.

If you leave your native, northern habitat for a trip south, you will need special cosmetics for skin protection and beautification. Those which helped your skin in the nippy climate will be found wanting where the sun is hot.

A cooling, liquifying cleanser is the first must, and its natural companion is a mild skin lotion or tonic. You are then prepared to cleanse and soothe burned skin (which occurs even though you try to be careful), without resorting to water.

No meticulous beauty would feel well groomed without a reliable deodorant, a floral scented cologne and a box of nicely scented body powder. See that your beach bag contains them as well as your traveling cosmetic case.

About Superfluous Hair
Summer clothes naturally expose more of our bodies than those we wear in winter, so immediately the problem of superfluous hair crops up. To feel well poised, your legs and arms and underarms should be smooth as a baby's skin, and, even though it does take time and patience, you should rid them of unsightly growths with a dependable, well-tested depilatory. Or if the hair is light, and not too obvious, use a strong bleach. Do not, however, attempt to clear your skin or bleach the superfluous hair, while it is irritated from too much sun or wind. Wait until it is soothed.

Remember that you travel south for fun, and you must be ready to don an evening frock or bathing suit at a moment's notice. If you plan sufficient time or personal daintiness you will be ever ready for fun and armed with a comfortable self-assurance.

About Protection
Few of us are fortunate enough to have the type of skin which requires no protection from the sun's rays. A sun-screening cream or oil applied before exposure is the safest bet and if you loiter around for many hours you will find frequent applications a great protection. Always use a quickly absorbed foundation cream beneath your make-up, even when you are only a spectator, beneath the sun. For glares and reflections can scorch skin as quickly as the direct rays.

Select a foundation cream or lotion to match in shade your current skin tone. Don't apply a pink one over a glowing tan, for the effect will be disastrous. Your powder too, should be made darker as your skin tone changes.

Naturally, brighter lipsticks are a prettier contrast to tanned skin, so supply yourself with the newest cruise-fashion shades before you pack your trunk.

Many women prefer light floral fragrances in perfume to the heavier mixtures, but that is decidedly a personal problem. Some tropical nights are made more romantic by wearing your favored fragrance even though it may be a brew from the orient or the jungle! Just be careful not to dim your own fragrant personality by wearing too much perfume. The tropics have a habit of exaggerating the fragrance in any blend!

A bleach for superfluous hair and a list of tested deodorants are available upon request. Write me care of this paper and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Today I am making a severe indictment of many clergymen, not because I don't sympathize with and endorse their efforts as a usual thing, but because when I urge people to go back to church, many of the clergymen embarrass me in the manner which Marsha describes below. There is no good excuse for any intelligent person to do such a thing.

CASE P-177: Marsha B., aged 19, is a diligent church worker.

"We have a very fine clergyman in our church," she admitted. "He likes the young people, and has a pleasant personality."

"But I must confess, he isn't very successful in the pulpit. The audience fell asleep before he had been talking 10 minutes."

"People admit that he is a very fine man but poor in the pulpit," Dr. Crane, it seems a shame to me that breaker" words, or discourse in lengthy, involved sentences.

He was a staunch exponent of horse sense. He translated metaphysical concepts into tangible examples or parables. Even a fifth grader could understand Jesus. He would have made a topnotch newspaper editor and an ace reporter.

He never talked in foreign tongues, or quibbled about picaresque points of theology. The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath. He indicted His quibbling critics when they yelped about His disciples shelling out some grain on the Sabbath.

"Cast not your pearls before swine," he told his followers, meaning, "Talk language your customers or parishioners can understand."

Like Abraham Lincoln, he told stories and anecdotes to His audience. But His stories were not irrelevant. They were to the point. He used the "anecdotal method" whereby He strung together a series of narratives or stories, the total procedure constituting His address.

The World's Greatest Orator
Demosthenes has erroneously been taught our school children as the world's number 1 orator. But he wasn't as good as Jesus, who was a past master of applied psychology.

You newspaper readers who haven't read the Bible don't realize what a great psychologist Jesus was. Some day I'll schedule a series of Case Records on Jesus, and show you. They even climbed trees to obtain vantage points for hearing Him speak.

Too many clergymen today are putting normally wide awake business to sleep, so the latter decide they can do it better at home in bed than in the uncomfortable pews of a funeral auditorium. Send me a long, stamped and self-addressed envelope with a dime for printing costs if you wish my bulletin on the "Formula for Being An Interesting Speaker." And send a copy to your clergyman if he needs it.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a dime in cover typing or printing costs when you seek personal advice or one of his psychological charts.)

No Educational Value in Merely Recognizing Words

BY ANGELO PATRI

Reading is the basic factor in education. Any intelligent person who has learned to read can educate himself. But he must be able to read. That is an ability too often taken for granted. One sees a child reading a book and concludes that he can read. Maybe he can. But maybe he cannot, and that doubt is well grounded in the sad fact that many children who read books cannot really read.

The reason for reading is the content of the printed words. There are many readers who can pronounce the words correctly but who, after pronouncing them, have not caught the meaning that is in them. Try that out some time. Ask a high school student of ordinary standing to read an editorial in any daily newspaper and then to write out what it told him. If he is able to do this he reads well. If he is unable, he cannot, for educational purposes, read at all.

This lack of reading ability is the bane of the teachers' lives in all upper schools. That the students do not know how to study is their common lament. This is true. The students cannot study with ease and economy of effort because they do not know how to read a text.

Not Reading
Nobody is to blame for this unless it is the whole community. Children begin to learn to read in their first term in school. Here they learn to recognize some two hundred or more words. They call them over in reading a story. They know most of them by location in the sentence or on the page, and the pictures help too. For three years they learn to read this way and by the fourth year it is generally taken for granted that they know how to read. They do not. They know how to recognize words but unless emphasis has been placed upon the content of those words they get little out of it.

This emphasis should be put on all reading from the fourth school year forward. No child should read without stating the content of what he has just read. Stories are the best medium for this work because the child can get the meaning of a story when he cannot dig out the content of an informational article.

The younger child needs stories. As the children advance these stories are directed toward the literature, history and science of the curriculum and so become valuable supplements to the study hours.

Important Points
As soon as a child has a text he should be taught to read it for the purpose of getting knowledge from it. Please notice that reading for reading's sake and reading for information are two different activities. One is for pleasure and should be given its due, and no more. The other is the tool with which a child digs out his education and it must be fitted for his mind by daily classroom practice.

There is no sense in sending children home with texts and the direction to learn the next ten pages. First those pages must be read in the study fashion, for information. Here the children are trained to pick out the points that are important and to ignore the rest. They must learn what to skip and what to read intensively. And they must learn how to take notes. This is the legitimate reading lesson in all elementary and first grades in high school. All other subjects must depend upon masterly reading.

Let's teach it.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

One Is Beloved

BY LOUISE PLATT HAUCK

YESTERDAY: Sue meets a writer, Eric Farraday, at Patsy's apartment, and is instantly attracted to him.

Chapter 25
Love At Last
If she was vaguely disappointed that Eric allowed her to go without protest, she fought down the thought. She had the feeling that she had been handling, ignorantly, a current of high voltage. An exciting business but a dangerous one. Better give thanks it did not concern her.

Still, she was far from surprised when his name was brought to her the next afternoon. She glanced down at her floating draperies of chiffon, the color of winter oak leaves. Had she put it on in the expectation of his coming? But when she was home she nearly always dressed for possible tea time callers, she defended herself.

It was the last coherent and self-accusatory thought she was to have for weeks. Day after hectic day arrived, whirling her closer to the hour when she found herself in Eric's arms, shaken with a deep thrilling passion of which she had come to believe herself temperamentally incapable.

No recollection of Bob reproached her. Conscience was dead or, if it was not, it was dragged into acquiescence by emotion more potent than itself. Duty was a word without meaning, marriage was a half-forgotten dream, the world did not exist. Nothing mattered except love. There was no one on earth but Eric.

Unbelievably, nobody suspected what was happening to her; not Bob, nor Allen, nor Barbara, nor even Patsy. The very openness with which Eric's calls were made disarmed suspicion. The town was delightedly aware of his presence by now. The happy accident of his cousin's illness and the happier one of the great man's charming devotion to his relative were accepted complacently. Dinners were given in his honor. Clubs fought for one of his rarely delivered lectures. His aloofness added to his prestige. The rumor got about that Bob Trenton had known him in New York, and it was taken for granted that the hon should spend much of his time at the house north of town.

Bob said admiringly: "Gosh, Sue, I didn't know you were so all-fired brainy! I'm free to admit I don't know what this Farraday guy's talking about half the time, but it's plain you do." He chuckled dryly. "Everybody wants to entertain him but I notice they're all willing to use you as a shock absorber. Don't you get tired being put next to him most of the time?"

She smiled dreamily and shook her head. Bob was the shadowy person who lived in the house with her, who was so absorbed in business these days that he had little time for anything else, who was proud that she could hold her own with the distinguished visitor and relieved that he could shunt the conversation on her on the rare occasions the two men talked.

Even the usually clear-sighted Barbara only commented: "Rather you than I, Sue dear! That man gives me cold shivers down my spine. I suppose you know we'll all see ourselves mercilessly analyzed some day in his confounded column?" And added affectionately: "Even an Eric Farraday couldn't find anything that's not true in you, darling. I suppose that's why you're so fearless with him."

Sue smiled, unheeding. She was feverishly, reckoning the number of hours that must pass before she and Eric would meet again.

Her queer little face was full of authentic beauty during these brief weeks. A velvet bloom rested on her cheeks, her lips were tenderly, endearingly curved. There were low notes of music in her young voice that made people glance at her, startled, at times.

"Decide!"

Eric, on the contrary, grew thin and haggard. A perpetual frown caught his brows together, darkening his eyes. His forbidding dignity blinded even Allen to what was happening to both man and woman.

Farraday went punctiliously each morning to the hospital to visit his cousin. He sent flowers to the few women at whose homes he convalesced to dine. He was the reluctant guest of the Chamber of Commerce at luncheon, and strove to overlay cynicism with courtesy, the result being a cryptic series of sentences at which the members laughed with some uneasiness.

"Clever chap," they told one another on relieved breaths as the meeting broke up. "My wife says he's the literary sensation of the decade. Bright thought, feller?"

It thrilled everybody to read the Farraday column every Sunday and speculate as to whether it had been written weeks beforehand or actually while the author was in town. There was some talk of paying him honor, formally, in a civic way, but as no one could think of a fitting manner they let the idea slide.

The evening came at last when Eric said: "Sue, we must decide!"

Significance of the Obvious Is Topic of Quill, Scroll Speech

"Search for the true relationship of forces and the truth will become your servant," Dr. Richard O. Cummings, assistant professor of history at Lawrence college, told members and alumni of the Edward Weismiller chapter of Quill and Scroll at their annual alumni banquet Thursday evening in the Appleton High school cafeteria. Dr. Cummings, as speaker, chose for his subject "The Significance of the Obvious."

Using the invention of the dynamo as his illustration, Dr. Cummings traced the ramifications of the invention into almost every pathway of human life from the trolley cars to the nickelodeons. As the letter in Poe's story, "The Purloined Letter," the most significant things are frequently the most obvious, he declared.

The toastmistress for the occasion was Ellen Balliet, Astyrene Hammer, editor of the Talisman, welcomed the alumni, while Helen McGrath responded for the graduates. During the dinner hour the string ensemble played "Southland" by Zaenick, "Lotus Leaves" by Creighton and "Prædilectum" by Reynard. Members of the group are Ellen Arnold, Franklin Ritzke, Bette Stevens, Stanley Williams and Orville Milheiser.

Officers of Quill and Scroll are Joseph Marston, president; Betty Meidam, vice president; Beverly Olson, secretary; and Norma Crow, treasurer.

Near Capacity Houses Attend 'Gone With the Wind' Premiere

BY VIOLA HELLERMANN
Heralded by the biggest publicity campaign ever used to advertise a movie and based on a book which thousands had read and loved, "Gone With the Wind" had a tremendous reputation to live up to. But that the movie more than fulfilled that reputation seemed to be the unanimous opinion of the two near capacity houses that saw its Appleton premiere Thursday at the Appleton theater.

Superlatives are the only words that will do it justice. Technically probably the most beautiful picture ever to be shown on the screen, each scene was a work of art.

That Clark Gable, Olivia de Havilland and Leslie Howard would give outstanding performances was expected by movie-goers who had seen them in other successes, but Vivien Leigh was the surprise. She was Scarlett O'Hara come to life. A selfish and calculating flirt, high-strung and beautiful, Miss Leigh was Margaret Mitchell's heroine in spirit as well as appearance—even to the dark tresses and green eyes that Scarlett loved to accent with gowns and hats of the same green color. She played an extremely difficult role to perfection.

Readers of the book were relieved to find that the story had not been tampered with. All of the book's most dramatic scenes, from the barbecue to the rows on rows of wounded at the Atlanta station, the burning of Atlanta and Rhett Butler's walking out on Scarlett at the close, were intact.

David Ray of WTAQ interviewed various "first-nighters" relative to their opinion of both the movie and the book in the theater lobby at 7:45 last night. In appreciation of the broadcast, congratulatory telegrams were sent to the radio station by Victor Fleming, director of the picture, and Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable, the two main players.

AAA Committees To Study Program

Series of Meetings Will be Held in Winnebago
County

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau
Oshkosh—Beginning Monday, a series of educational meetings explaining the features of the 1940 AAA program will be held at various points in Winnebago county. R. C. Heffernan, county agricultural agent, announced today.

A film made by the Wisconsin Dairy Industries association, the organization sponsoring a state-wide dairy promotion plan, will be shown. The organization's plan to deduct a half-cent per pound of butterfat from every milk producer's check for advertising the dairy industry also will be discussed.

The schedule of meetings is as follows: Feb. 12, 1.30 p. m. county courthouse, Oshkosh, for the towns of Oshkosh, Algoma, Vinland and Black Wolf; Feb. 15, 1.30 p. m. Elgin, for the towns of Nekimi and Uti-ca; 8 p. m., Neenah city hall for the towns of Neenah and Menasha; Feb. 19, 1.30 p. m., Winneconne village hall for Winneconne, Poygan and Omro; 8 p. m., Winchester for Winchester, Clinton and Wolf River; Feb. 20, 1.30 p. m., Eureka for Rushford and Nepeuskun.

Wool Growers Co-Op Markets 4 Million Pounds in 10 Years

During the 10 years of its existence the Wisconsin Cooperative Wool Growers association has successfully marketed 4,650,000 pounds of wool for state wool growers. It was reported at the annual meeting held during Farm and Home week at Madison. The association has members in every county of the state.

In 1930 the co-operative handled approximately 500,000 pounds of wool and paid with a total value of $200,000 for 2,505 wool grower members. The same year it netted its members 364 cents per pound for their farm flock wools as compared with an average of about 25 cents per pound received by growers selling at shearing time. The profit received by its members above shearing time prices on the tonnage handled by the cooperative exceeded $50,000 and all final settlements reached the members before Dec. 1. Over the 10 years that the cooperative has marketed the wool clip directly to mills for its member growers, all operating expense has been prorated to growers each

PENNSYLVANIA 'TEST-TUBE' CALF

This "test tube" calf was born in Pennsylvania. Dr. Alfred Kisseloff, Flourtown, Pa., veterinarian, is applying the stethoscope. A year of work in test tube breeding at the New Jersey state agricultural college at Rutgers university have brought excellent results.

Jersey Dairymen Find Test Tube Cattle Breeding Pays

BY WILLIAM H. GLOVER
New Brunswick, N. J.—(AP)—Richer milk from improved quality cows, increased dairy income and "mass production" of blue-blooded cattle have been achieved by Dr. John W. Bartlett as the results of one year's work in "test tube" breeding at the state agricultural college at Rutgers university.

While bossie and her owner reap the benefits, her bellowing partner may get chased forever from his pastoral haunts into the antiseptic stalls of a laboratory-barn as a result of a research.

Rutgers university has pioneered in the program of artificial insemination under the direction of Dr. Bartlett, head of its experimental station's dairy division.

The idea of carefully selecting a few top-notch bulls of the best blood lines and increasing their progeny by "test tube" impregnation was brought from Denmark by E. J. Perry, extension dairyman at the college.

More Experimenting
Three units comprising 20 bulls and 6,000 cows started the program in New Jersey.

The experts now are expanding the work of making the finest stock available to the smallest farm, investigating how to exercise and feed the parents for the best results, and determining what unknown factors may enter into extensive artificial breeding.

"The first year's work on artificial breeding has indicated that it equals natural breeding methods from the standpoint of rates of conception," Dr. Bartlett said. "The artificial method has made it possible to use proved sires and, through the work of trained veterinarians, a number of cases of sterility of cows has been overcome."

"Artificial breeding has prevented any spread of disease through the use of a sire because all methods have been artificial and only sterilized equipment has been used."

"Statistics show that one bull improved the fat test of his daughters over their mothers by approximately 4-10 of 1 per cent. On the milk check, this means 1-3 to 1 cent a quart for every quart produced. When we consider 1,000 daughters for this bull this means an increased dairy income for owners of these daughters of $33.33 a day, or more than $12,000 a year. This is in addition to higher milk yields."

Dairymen Approve
"Records show that a large percentage of dairymen who previously owned bulls, most of which were unproved, have discarded them and are using proved sires provided through artificial breeding units."

One of the units has set up the first laboratory-barn at Clinton, N. J. Two residents of it, Career and Alice, will have fathered 616 and 406 offspring, respectively, during the first 15 months of the program.

Through "test tube" breeding, these and the other proved bulls are producing in one year, 10 times the number of offspring an ordinary bull would produce in a lifetime.

HOLD UP TRAINS
Popular Bluff, Mo.—(AP)—The St. Louis and San Francisco railroad has asked police to keep motorists from parking on tracks that parallel a city street.

Engineers, the railroad complained, have been forced to stop trains until cars parked on the tracks could be removed.

One Is Beloved

BY LOUISE PLATT
HAUCK

"Decide!"
They were sitting before the fire, each in a fat armchair covered in peacock blue tapestry. Against the brilliant background Sue's black head was in startling contrast. It was another of the evenings when Bob, murmuring something about having extra work to do at the office, had fled from what he considered the rather boring society of the columnist. Since his departure the two had sat in silence. Sue's drowsy content unbroken even by thought.

"Decide, Eric?"
His deliberate glance flicked her into attention.

"When and how you are to leave Trenton."

"Leave Bob?" She was like a swimmer coming to the surface of warm and pleasant waters; coming reluctantly to the surface.

"But, Eric, I can't—"

"Nonsense! Use your brains, Sue! We love each other, you and I. Trenton is well, nothing to us. Don't be unduly perturbed, but that can't be helped. We're intelligent people. We must decide what's best to do. Since Art made up his mind to get well instead of die, there's no excuse for my lingering here any longer. I don't wish to, in fact, I hate this smug town—any town except New York."

He moved restlessly in his chair, gripping its arms with his thin strong fingers. "I need the stimulus of many people—things happening."

"Divorce!"
She sat silent, a troubled look slowly forming on her dreaming face.

"Can't we go on as we are, Eric—for a while longer anyway?"

"No, we can't!" He spoke so sharply that she winced. "Use your head, my darling! There is only one possible way out of this situation: divorce. Trenton's a good fellow in his way. He'll give it to you. Or if he doesn't you can leave him without one. It really doesn't matter." He leaned forward, his eyes suddenly alight. "All that matters, my love, my dear little love! is that we two shall be together—always! Oh, Lord God," he said more in reverence than in profanity, "to think I should find you after all these years! To think that there should be a you and that the mere chance of Art's illness, the fortuitous element of my meeting your brainless sister-in-law, should have brought us together!"

"I tell you," he continued, sinking his voice and gripping the chair arms still more tightly, "I wake in the night sometimes, sweating with fear to realize how very nearly by what a narrow margin I failed to know you at all! Pats had ceased to amuse me—two hours in her company turned her soul inside out for me. I intended to avoid recognition here if it was humanly possible; simply see Art through the worst of it, or ease his last hours if it turned out that way, and go back. And then the door opened, and you walked into my life!"

He buried his face suddenly in his hands, a gesture which would have seemed womanish in another man but which sharply accentuated his words in Eric.

"I who have always scoffed at love am like the most pitiable of its victims, Sue. The day doesn't begin for me until I hear your voice. There's magic in your look, the touch of your hand. Whatever you wear seems to me the most beautifully fitted garment a woman ever assumed. The way your lips part over your teeth is to me a revelation of loveliness. There is no one like you—no one!"

He laughed, a wildness in his mirth that startled her.

"I to talk like that—feel like that! I can't believe it of myself; but then I can't believe there's a woman like you, Sue. Do you know you've never told me—in words—that you love me?"

She answered rather sadly: "Do I have to tell you—in words? I wish it were not true, Eric!"

"That is," he said deliberately, "about as wicked a thing as you could say. As well say you wish you'd never breathed; never known hunger and its satisfaction; never opened your eyes on beauty, or inclined your ears to music. Never to have known love, Sue! Just to have been half alive, darling!"

"I know! But . . . Bob" she said, very low.

"Hurtling him—" She swallowed. "Can't it possibly be avoided?"

"How?" he demanded. "Certainly not by staying on with him—living a life as his wife, my Sue. That would be the real wrong, the greatest wrong you could do him. Besides . . . he's had the first ecstasy, the first rapture of marriage. By now he's settled down into a routine of business and home. Your leaving him will be a shock, of course, but not the devastating one you think it will."

She smiled. "Will it be that way with you, too, Eric? Will you settle into routine when the first rapture has subsided?"

Continued tomorrow.

Soybeans Should Not be Planted On Sloping Soil

Extension Agronomist
Predicts Larger Crop
For This Year

"The soybean likely will become a still more important crop in Wisconsin in 1940."

That's the opinion of George Briggs, state extension agronomist, according to a bulletin received by J. F. Magnus, Outagamie county agent. Along with a reduction in the acreage of corn, allotted to corn growers in the commercial corn belt, Briggs states. One of the best substitutes for corn in filling the silo is the first cutting of alfalfa, but Briggs thinks that many farmers may find it necessary to use soybeans for this purpose.

Soybeans and corn, it is known, make excellent silage. If equal parts of soybeans and corn, or preferably one load of soybeans to each two loads of corn, are ensiled the necessity of using molasses or other preservative is avoided, according to Briggs.

Wisconsin farmers, who participated in the 1939 agricultural conservation program, grew more than 150,000 acres of soybeans for hay last year, reports Briggs. More than half of this acreage was planted in the western and southwestern section of the state where soil erosion is a serious problem.

Briggs believes that farmers, who plant soybeans for hay on sloping land, are risking serious damage from soil erosion and he suggests that grass legume crops and nurse crops be used for hay whenever possible, on such land.

Highs, Vikes on Foreign Courts

Appleton Invades Green Bay East, Lawrence Shows at Beloit

APPLETON High school and Lawrence college basketball teams will be in action tonight on foreign floors. Appleton invades Green Bay East while the Vikings will show at Beloit college and at Knox on Saturday evening. Appleton will attempt to make it two straight for the season over East at the Bay. The teams met here in December and the Red Devils played back and allowed the Terror guards to sink several long range shots which brought a win. The situation probably won't be repeated tonight which means the Terrors will have to find another way to score.

The Terror lineup undoubtedly will be the same as that used in other games recently. Cooper and Burton will be at the forwards with Lathrop at center. The guards will be Blacher and Kliefoth. For Green Bay East it probably will be Mancheksky and Nicholson at the forwards, Heitzky at center and Ward and Rollins, guards.

East Beat Fondy Tuesday night Appleton bowed to Sheboygan Central in a thriller in which Appleton led or had the score tied until the final three minutes. The Terrors had many opportunities but couldn't put the ball through the hoop.

East is feeling confident of a win because of the manner in which the Red Devils clicked against Fond du Lac. They defeated the Cardinals, 35 to 30.

Lawrence goes up against Beloit with every intention of winning if possible. The Viking rating in the Midwest isn't so good but if Coach Denney can win a couple of the final contests he'll feel the season has been enough of a success.

In an effort to have his squad primed for the Gold, Denney worked on a zone defense this week. He feels it will work well on Beloit's rather small floor and he'll use his tall men to retrieve rebounds on Beloit's long shots. If the Gold happens to be "hot" on the long ones, then Denney will resort to a shot gun—or something.

Lawrence's starting lineup will show Cape and Fredrickson at the forward positions, Schade at center and Buesing and Linkle at the guards. Lawrence's biggest task will be to stop Eddie May's sprints for the basket, a feature which was handled well here in January.

Saturday Lawrence will continue fourth meeting Knox at Galesburg Saturday night.

Dizzy Dean and Boss May Confer

Great One, 15 Pounds Lighter, Is Visiting In Chicago

BY ARNOLD DERLITZKI
Chicago—(U)—The 1940 edition of Jerome Herman "Dizzy" Dean, who steamed off pounds—15 of them—instead of words this winter, comes to town today in the interest of baseball.

That could well mean his own interests for he has yet to sign a Chicago Cub contract. Ostensibly, however, his visit will be in line of duty for a Mississippi baseball school with which he is connected. The Cub hurler will chaperon a group of baseball pupils from Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan to the south Monday on a "Dizzy Dean Special."

When P. K. Wrigley learned of Dean's impending arrival, the Cub owner said:

"That's fine. Maybe I'll get a chance to see him."
And no doubt he will. Diz, who collected $41,000 for winning 13 games in the past two years (seven in 1938 and six last year), has expressed little desire to toil for $10,000 a year, his original 1940 contract.

He returned two contracts unsigned, wrote two letters and finally resorted to long-distance telephone calls late in January. He told Wrigley he wanted a contract that would provide for more money if he regained his old pitching form. Inasmuch as that is something of an old Wrigley custom anyway, the two reached a tentative agreement. So the signing, probably toward the close of Dean's visit here, may be only a formality. It is believed the agreement will fix Dean's salary at $12,000 or $15,000.

Combined Locks Grade Five in Another Win

Combined Locks—The Combined Locks graders defeated the Little Chute squad Wednesday by a score of 18-12.
John Van Deuren and James Harjes were outstanding for the Locks team with five and three buckets respectively. Billy Van Zeeland was high for the Little Chute squad with four points on two field goals.

CLINTONVILLE BOXERS IN GLOVES TOURNAY

Clintonville—Here's a warning to all contestants entered in the Golden Gloves boxing contests at Appleton Monday evening. Pictured above are 11 of the 20 boys who will make up the Clintonville delegation and they mean business. Several of the boys have taken part in golden gloves meets before and this year are planning on bringing back several of the titles. The boxers, getting a few final instructions from their coach, Harvey Sherman, are, front row, left to right, Delmer Buelow, 128 pounds, George Campbell, 112 pounds, Ken Laux, 100 pounds, Les Drumm, 126 pounds, and Art Zemke, 147 pounds; second row, left to right, Captain Bud Laux, 126 pounds, Ellsworth Buelow, 174 pounds, Vince McClone, 147 pounds, Curt Lemke, 192 pounds, Vilas Nass, 147 pounds, and Bud Hintz, 160 pounds.

National League Boasting of Its Crop of Rookies

New York—(U)—The National League, you may have heard, has some fancy rookies coming up this spring.

If you haven't heard you're going to, because Bill Brandt, the league's press representative, has just issued his annual "green book" with 18 of its 50 pages devoted to the exploits of the circuit's newcomers.

Red Tramback, for instance, the most valuable player in the Western association in 1939, is about to make his major league debut with the New York Giants. He won 21 games as a pitcher last season and played 87 games in the outfield, batting .332.

The Giants also will have the services of two others who were declared the most valuable in their leagues last season—Mickey Vernon from the International and Babe Young from the Southern association.

The Pittsburgh Pirates have the tallest man in baseball, pitcher Johnny (White) Gee, six feet nine inches and a 20-game pitcher for Syracuse in the International in 1939. Bob Elliott and Maurice Van Robays are said to be ready to step into regular outfield berths.

"Pee Wee" Reese, the Louisville kid who stole the show in the little world series last fall, is all set to take the shortstop job away from Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers—a good trick to even try.

McCarthy's Pep Talks Revealed by Di Maggio

San Francisco—(U)—Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees, has the art of master-minding his club into pennant and world series championships reduced to a simple matter, take the word of his star outfielder, Joe Di Maggio.

During a baseball program of San Rafael fraternal organization last night, Di Maggio was asked if McCarthy holds meetings with the players.

"Sure, he holds meetings, twice a season," Di Maggio replied. "One is on opening day and the other before the world series. On opening day he told us 'You've got the best club. I want you to win the pennant, you've got to.'"

"Before the world's series he said, 'I want you to win. Now go to it.'"

NEW YORK—(U)—Ninety per cent of the Louis-Godoy betting is being done on rounds . . . Roy Cullenbine's second highest offer came from the Browns—15,000 smack and a two-year contract . . . It's seven months until the football season, but already the "beat Cornell" banner has been hung up in the Dartmouth gym where the gridders are limbering up . . . Coach Dana X Bible is toying with the idea of making a quarter-back out of Jack Crain next season . . . ## Beloit, Viking Teams to Clash

Wrestlers and Swimmers Will Show at Alexander Gym Tomorrow

Lawrence college's swimming and wrestling teams will open their respective seasons in dual meets with Beloit in Alexander gymnasium here Saturday afternoon. Hank Dillon, who coaches the swimmers, and Bernie Heseltun, mat instructor, are faced with the problem of whipping competitive teams out of inexperienced squads.

The natators will be led by three lettermen, Seldon Spencer, Williams Bay, and Miles Hensch of Appleton, free styler, and Jack Brand, Chicago, breast stroke. The rest of the squad is untried and not expected to be ready for the kind of competition that the Gold is expected to present especially in the sprints, free style, and diving.

The invaders also have a powerful wrestling squad, led by Plinske of Green Bay. Against them Heseltun is expecting to pit Bruce Burroughs, Fond du Lac, pinch hitting for Dick Rothe, Sheboygan, who is out following an appendectomy, in the 121 pound class; Vernon Kramer, Appleton, 129; Charles Hobbes, Fond du Lac, 136; William Owen, Niles, Mich., or Keith Ridgway, Rosendale, 145; Bill Diver, La Grange, Ill., 155; Robert Mac Intosh, Milwaukee, 165; Al Florin, Chicago, 175; and Dave Spalding, Menasha, heavyweight.

Big Ten Cagers Resume Firing Tomorrow Night

Purdue, Undefeated Leader, Will Take on Indiana Five

CHICAGO—(U)—The Hoosier state, always a hotbed of basketball, will supply the principal fireworks tomorrow night when the Big Ten begins the last lap of its conference title race.

Purdue, the undefeated league leader, and Indiana University, tied for second place in the standings, will battle it out at Bloomington.

Indiana, early choice of the experts to take the crown, swept all before it until Minnesota uncorked a last minute basket which dealt Coach Branch McCracken's team its only setback of the season, 46 to 44. Indiana, with Capt. Marvin Huffman expected back in the lineup after suffering an injury last week, will enter the game with three conference triumphs against one defeat, the same standing as Michigan. Purdue, beaten twice outside the conference, has been invincible within the league and owns four victories in a row, including a 50-31 decision over Minnesota.

Michigan, meantime, will seek to maintain its contending position with a victory over Northwestern at Evanston; Minnesota plays at Illinois, Ohio State at Chicago and Wisconsin at Iowa.

Northwestern warmed up for the resumption of title play by noising out Butler last night, 32 to 30. It was Butler's fourth loss in six starts against Big Ten competition—Illinois, Indiana and Ohio State also having won. Iowa and Wisconsin were Butler's victims.

Scholastic troubles cost Wisconsin its fifth squad member since the end of the first semester when Erwin Karp of Madison was declared ineligible yesterday. Karp was a reserve forward.

BADGERS DEPLETED
Madison—(U)—Reduction of the University of Wisconsin basketball squad by ineligibilities has eased Coach Harold Foster's task of selecting players who make out of town trips.

The Badger mentor, preparing for resumption of Big Ten competition against Iowa at Iowa City tomorrow night, indicated yesterday he had little choice in the matter since his squad had been depleted to a scant dozen.

Foster was hopeful of a victory over the Hawkeyes, however, counting heavily on scout reports that Iowa lacks stamina and has shown a consistent letdown in the last half of most of its games this season. The Badgers have won one game and lost three in conference play.

"If we can stick with them in the first half, we probably can outlast them," Foster said.

Although he was advised that Ted Strain, of Sycamore, Ill., a guard, had been ruled definitely ineligible, Foster found some comfort in the announcement that Erin Karp, of Madison, a forward, had been successful in an appeal to the faculty executive committee.

Karp, who broke into the Badger lineup against Butler university here Monday, had passing grades in mid-year examinations, but it was discovered he had failed in a course the previous semester. He contended, however, that the course was an elective, and the committee wiped the failure of his record.

The Badger squad will leave for Iowa City this afternoon. They will return Sunday in time for a practice session in preparation for a game with Minnesota here Monday night.

Miss Amory, showing surprising improvement, easily ousted the tournament titlist, Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I., 3 and 1.

Lambeau Sees Packers Win Over Collegians

Green Bay—(U)—Coach E. L. Lambeau of the Green Bay Packers, champions of the National Pro Football league, is looking forward to the date with the college all-stars at Chicago Aug. 29 with no little confidence.

Mindful of the 6-0 defeat handed the Packers in the same classic in 1937, Lambeau declared:

"I am sure we will make a better showing in this year's all-star game. When we played at Soldier's field in 1937, we had a squad made up of 25 of the best players in the United States rings—though losing only two of 12—figures to pick up about $17,500, along with a sore chin and, probably, assorted aches and pains."

Godoy's best chance appeared to be in staying in a crouch, and crowding in close as long as possible. Because, just as sure as it happened to Tony Galento and Paulino Uzcudun before him, as soon as Arturo comes out of the shell to take a peek at what's happening, there's going to be a slight explosion—right on the end of his chin.

Good Body Puncher
Remembering from Godoy's previous United States invasion a couple of years back that he is a better-than-average body puncher and considerably more adept in the crouching, bobbing, crowding style than is two-ton Tony, this corner figures the Chilean fisherman can stick around for a while. He's going to get curious along about the sixth round. He'll come to the surface, and any time after the fifth ends, so will Arturo's challenge, this corner believes.

As usual, Louis isn't doing his work for nothing.

The greatest box office attraction since Dempsey, will lure some 18,000 to 19,000 into paying about $110,000 to see him roll out his artillery.

Of this, Louis is to receive 40 per cent, less taxes, or about $40,000, thereby boosting his ring earnings in the five years since he started to punch for pay to more than $170,000. Godoy, who was no ball before, we had a squad made up of 25 of the best players in the United States rings—though losing only two of 12—figures to pick up about $17,500, along with a sore chin and, probably, assorted aches and pains.

"This year we will face them three deep at every position."

N. W. Baseball Coach Never Competed in College Athletics

Evanson, Ill. (17)—Stan Klores, new baseball coach at Northwestern university, had the unusual experience of never competing in college athletics even though he was the outstanding baseball player in the university.

Klores played first base on the Milwaukee C. Y. O. championship baseball team when a senior at West Allis High school. This club won the national championship at Cubs park, Chicago, in 1931.

Charlie Grimm, manager of the Cubs was attracted by Klores' ability and promptly had him signed to a contract. Klores excelled at Northwestern that fall, but was ineligible because of the Cubs' contract in Peoria in the Three Eye League, in Portsmouth, Va., in the Piedmont League, Montgomery, Ala., in the Southeastern League, and Milwaukee in the American Association. A broken leg kept him out of baseball in 1930.

Klores went to Northwestern one semester each year while playing baseball. He plans to concentrate on coaching and forget professional baseball in favor of graduate study at the university.

Max Butcher Signs His Pirate Contract

Pittsburgh (17)—The Pirates got a 220-pound package today which they hope will smooth the rocky National league baseball trail this summer.

President Bill Benswanger announced he has received the signed contract of 6 feet, 3 inch Max Butcher, who came to Pittsburgh last summer from the Phillies. The big right hand hurler won only six games against seventeen defeats last year, but after joining the Pirates broke even with four and four.

Nine Bucs remain unsigned, the club announced, including infielders Arky Vaughan, Pep Young, Lee Handley and Eugene Handley, outfielders Lloyd Waner and Fern Bell, pitchers Bob Klinger and Russ Bauers and catcher Ray Berres.

IMPROVES WITH PROGRESS Cincinnati (17)—Russell Bevell, 21-year-old infielder drafted by the Reds from New Orleans of the Southern League, has improved his batting percentage each time he advanced in his profession. In 1937, with Gainesville in the Class D Florida State League, he batted .268, then graduated to the Class C Springfield Club of the Mid Atlantic League. There he hit .321 moved to New Orleans in the Class A Southern League, and compiled a .326 average. Now he's with the Reds, and if he continues that improvement with each promotion, Bill McKeechin really will have something.

SORENSEN Bakery nosed out Pond Sport Shop, 35 to 31, Lutz Ice Co. trounced Central Paper Co., 66 to 24, and Valley Sporting Goods defeated Wire Works, 43 to 22, in City-Y. M. C. A. league tilts at Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening.

Pond Sports, after trailing, 9 to 8 and 22 to 11, at the end of the first two periods, staged a comeback in the third quarter but couldn't quite overtake Sorensen Bakery. The Bakery showed a thin lead of 24 to 22 at the end of the third stanza and were only one basket ahead of Pond cagers with three minutes to go in the final period. Bill Besch led Pond cagers with some sterling work at center and copped scoring honors with 18 points, followed by Paulie with 10 points.

Valley Sporting Goods started fast and Wire Works never came close as the former took a 12 to 5 lead at the end of the first frame, increased it to 23 to 6 at the halfway mark and 35 to 15 at the end of the third quarter. Wire Workers had trouble hitting the hoop with the ball circling the rim many times. Scoring honors went to Cliff Burton with 12 points on 6 buckets. Cliff Bauers was close behind with 11 points on 5 field goals and a charity toss.

Lutz Ice Co. had little trouble with Central Paper Co. as the squad took a 17 to 8 lead at the end of the first quarter and a 32 to 17 advantage at halftime. Womser led the scoring with 23 points on 10 buckets and 3 gift shots.

Means expects at least 30 colleges to enter this year, compared to 27 in 1939.

Coe college of Cedar Rapids, Ia., has won the team championship twice, and Grinnell (Ia.) college once.

Junior Boat Club To be Nucleus of Sea Scout Troop

New London Group Forming Organization For Young Sailors

New London — Organization of a Junior Boat Club under the auspices of the New London Boat Club, Inc., is underway this week.

Boys interested in the club met Wednesday evening at the home of Warren Shoemaker, senior club member, who has been appointed skipper of the group, and will meet again at the boat club's clubhouse this afternoon to elect officers and complete the organization.

Fourteen boys forming the junior group are Kenneth Jeffers, Everett Darrow, James Nelson, Allen Ziebur, Dick Wyman, Bob Nelson, Tom Blissett, Sammy Shoemaker, James Kuehlman, Jack Monsted, Robin Lyon, Lee Macklin, Norbert Humbert, and Wilton Kuntz. Regular meetings will be held every second and fourth Friday.

Early activities of the group will be confined to the study of technical matters such as government rules and regulations governing boating, charting of waterways and routes, types of boats and such subjects.

It is the plan of the senior boat club ultimately to use the junior club as the nucleus for a Sea Scout troop. There are only three such troops in Wisconsin, at Oshkosh, Green Bay and Milwaukee, and the requirements are rigid. A sea scout must first become a senior scout. The minimum age at which a boy may become a sea scout is 15 while the boat club will accept junior members from 10 years up.

One Firm Completes Pack: Another Building Storage Structure

New London — Ice harvesting on the Wolf river this season promises to be the heaviest in years as one concern has just completed its largest packing job and another is erecting a new ice house in preparation for harvesting soon.

Construction work was begun yesterday on a new, modern ice house of 3,000-ton capacity for the New London Ice and Fuel company at the site of the old ice house at the east end of Beacon avenue. Cutting will be started by the company within a week or two and construction of the ice house will be completed after storing begins. The ice is the best in years, workmen report. A planer was used to remove the top crust and the harvest was accomplished in 10 days. It was the company's largest.

Clapper Scores Garner for Cut in Aeronautics Outlay

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—It would have been more fortunate if Vice President Garner's vote in favor of economy could have come on such other measure than the one on which it occurred, a proposal to reduce the amount voted by the house for the civil aeronautics authority.

Perhaps it is not kind to begrudge the vice president this rare opportunity to put in his nickel's worth. The vice president's daily chore is a dull one. He must preside over the senate but he cannot participate in debate. He must just sit there and try to stay awake. Only when there is a tie may he vote.

All of these years Mr. Garner has been sitting in the chair, staying awake and chewing his cud. Finally, this week, for the first time since 1934, a tie vote occurred and Mr. Garner had his chance to vote.

The question was on an appropriation bill item and Mr. Garner, acting in character, voted for economy. He told senators afterward that any time he had the opportunity he would vote to cut appropriations. The item involved was a small one, a saving of $115,250 below what the house had voted. Nevertheless Vice President Garner's vote was hailed as a significant event. It would be a symbol to rally the economy forces.

The economy forces need all of the rallying that can be given to them. But this particular event, if it is a symbol of anything, is a symbol of indiscriminate economy, of punching at the wrong place. Or as Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri said, economy at the expense of developing safe commercial aviation is penny-wise, pound-foolish.

There is no better example of constructive government activity in the interest of the public and industry than its assistance to commercial aviation. This year the government is spending $25,518,000. The budget bureau recommended for the coming fiscal year $28,921,000, a slight increase. The house cut that to $27,900,000. The senate appropriations committee recommended a still further reduction to $26,721,000. Garner's vote came on a piece of that cut.

Air travel has grown with spectacular rapidity. Last December it was 74 per cent greater than in December a year ago. Heavy expansion is ahead. Within a few months 40 passenger planes will come in, almost twice the carrying capacity of the largest air liners now flying.

Government Assistance Is Aid to Air Safety

By train it takes all night and practically all of the next day to ride from El Paso, Tex., to Dallas, Tex., only part way across Mr. Garner's state. But you can board a plane at El Paso after dinner, and get up in New York in time for breakfast. That's what air travel means.

That is possible because of government assistance — weather reports, radio beams, lighted airways, constant checking on personnel and equipment, and numerous other provisions for the safety of air passengers. As a result, air travel has become almost as safe as crossing the street. There has not been a fatality for nearly a year. Airplanes have handled some 500,000,000 passenger-miles of business. Those who use airplanes frequently have ceased to think of safety—it is taken as a matter of course. The future of this means of travel, with its inestimable benefits, depends upon the safety factor. Progress there depends upon both the industry and government technical services.

A sum under $50,000,000, small as government activities are measured, can be an investment which will return many-fold. That isn't a wise place to save a nickel. Isn't congress about to vote tens of millions for Finland and China?

But if we are going to shave down at the price of cramping one of our new industries, with enormous possibilities, we can only hope that the senators will not lose their newfound enthusiasm for economy when the political grab-bag bills come up and the opportunity is offered for real economizing on activities that never would be missed.

VITAMIN G

VITAMIN G
Today's story is to be about Vitamin G, another highly important element in food.
Sometimes Vitamin G is called "B2" but the name of "G" has clung to it. This is due, in part at least, to an effort to honor Goldberger, the pioneer in finding how to cure pellagra. It holds his initials to this day, and is the only vitamin with an initial which honors a man who tried to find it.

Work in the last few years has shown, however, great good which Vitamin G can do. To put it another way, we now know that a person is likely to suffer trouble if he does not have Vitamin G.

Recent tests have shown that chickens which do not have Vitamin G will suffer from nerve trouble. The "sciatic nerve" becomes greatly enlarged

"We might call the sciatic nerve the "hip nerve," since it runs through the flesh about the hip bones. It is the largest nerve in the body. When human beings have trouble with this nerve, they are said to suffer with "sciatica." It has not yet been fully proved that Vitamin G will keep people, as well as certain animals, from suffering with this painful disease, but it seems likely that the proof will be found.

Dr. Harry N. Holmes, vitamin expert at Oberlin college, lists these good results coming from eating food containing Vitamin G: "Growth, gain in weight, and increased vigor." Then he adds that this vitamin "helps us to live at our best and longer."

Milk, eggs, liver, prunes, spinach, turnip greens, and yeast are rich in Vitamin G. Among the other foods with a good supply of it are apples, oranges, bananas, grapefruit, lemons, raw cabbage, carrots, cantaloupes, lettuce, beef, potatoes, truck.

atoes, turnips and tomatoes. In that list I feel sure you will find several foods which you eat quite often, perhaps every day. Always keep in mind that the human body needs many vitamins, not just one. At the end of our series next week, I plan to sum up the foods which are the most richly stored with vitamins, and have the most kinds.

Menasha — A squad of 22 Menasha high school cagers will seek a double victory over Clintonville High school in Northeastern Wisconsin conference contests tonight at Clintonville. Reserve teams will clash at 7 o'clock and the varsity contest will follow at 8 o'clock.

Babson Says Hull Pacts are Bright Spot of New Deal

Asserts Policy Is Boost to Foreign Trade, U. S. Industry

BY ROGER BABSON

Washington, D. C.—A major offensive is being prepared here in Washington against the Hull trade pacts. For months, the G. O. P. has been collecting its verbal ammunition, marshalling its oratorical supplies. The zero hour is approaching because Secretary Hull's power to make trade agreements must be renewed before June 12, 1940. If the attack on these trade pacts is not repulsed it will be a sorry day, not only for the United States, but for the world. The backbone of the defeat would be felt in industrial towns of the east meeting on the shores of the great lakes, communities of the great plains.

The Hull trade pacts were started in 1934. Realizing that congress could never be expected to lower our tariff walls, President Roosevelt asked and received authority from congress for the state department to make reciprocal trade agreements without senate ratification. The principle of the pacts was to lower our tariffs on certain foreign products gradually and slowly in exchange for corresponding concessions from other nations on our products. By short circuiting congress, the usual logrolling tactics for high protection on "home industry" were to be eliminated.

When the New Deal first stumbled for this policy, world trade had dried up to a mere trickle. Commerce among nations had shrunk to 35 per cent of the 1929 level. Depreciated currencies, high tariff, stiff quotas, barrier methods, big subsidies, and similar barriers were rapidly clearing the world trade routes of their picturesque tankers, freighters, and other cargo boats. Most able economists agreed that the choking off of foreign commerce was a prime cause of joblessness, hunger, and suffering in all nations.

The importance of world trade has never been fully realized by most people. Foreign commerce is the keystone of world prosperity and peace. Our overseas markets in good times absorbed only 10 per cent of our total output; but that 10 per cent was a vital 10 per cent. Half of our cotton crop, for instance, was sold abroad. Think of the importance of cotton to United States prosperity. Southern banks, land values, jobs, wages, warehouses, railroads, shippers, are all tied-up with the price of cotton. And the price of cotton depends on our foreign markets.

It seems impossible, however, to get the importance of foreign trade across to the public. The high-tariff opposition has a far easier job. Inevitably, in any tariff-lowering program, some localities or some producers feel they will be hurt. They protest violently to their congressmen. Therefore, it is almost impossible to wangle any real tariff reductions through congress. Secretary Hull (a former senator) knew that the only way to lower tariffs and increase employment as a whole would be a reduction program which excused constituent, conscious congressmen from voting to ratify it. Hence, the state department's trade program came into being.

Over 20 reciprocal trade agreements have been negotiated since 1934. Secretary Hull and his experts have done a painstaking, conscientious job. They have started to do the job which practical God-fearing people admit must be done—a slow and gradual, rather than a sharp and sudden, decrease of tariff walls. They have held hundreds of hearings, have listened patiently to thousands of protests. For every concession they have made to foreign nations they have wrung from them an equally good one for Uncle Sam. Moreover, due to the so-called "most favored nation rule" these pacts have lowered tariffs.

"MAYOR" AND "COMMON COUNCIL" MEET AT MCKINLEY SCHOOL

Pupils of McKinley Junior High school learn about the functions of government by going through the work of city government themselves. The pupils elect a mayor and common council and learn civic responsibility by solving their own problems under the direction of Walter Fox, principal. Shown above is the mayor and his council at a meeting. Left to right around the table are: Helen Gamsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Gamsky, 1631 S. Oneida street, alderman from the seventh grade; Kenneth Hartzheim, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hartzheim, 1126 S. Lave street, alderman from the ninth grade; LaVern Welson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Welson, 1222 S. Monroe street, alderman from the ninth grade; Shirley Abel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Spay, 1209 S. Oneida street, secretary; Muriel Prue, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Prue, 1909 S. Jefferson street, mayor; Betty Horn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Horn, 704 E. Maple street, alderman from the eighth grade; Eugene Hoppe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hoppe, 150 S. Weimar street, alderman from the seventh grade; Bernard Davidson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Davidson, 1506 S. Kernan avenue, alderman from the eighth grade; and Carleton Selig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Selig, 318 E. Lincoln street, alderman from the ninth grade. (Post-Crescent Photo) helped business, given jobs all over the world.

Bright Spot of New Deal

The reciprocal trade program has been a truly bright spot of the New Deal. In his quiet, but firm way, Secretary Hull has fought harder for peace in this decade than any other man alive. He is a tower of strength, vision, and unselfishness. His program has increased our exports to countries with whom we have completed agreements by 60 per cent; while our exports to those countries with which we have not bargained have expanded less than 40 per cent! Moreover, our imports from treaty nations have not increased any faster than with non-treaty nations. This, in a nutshell, tells the effectiveness of the program, its aid to jobs and industry.

America, however, is a high-price, high-wage, high-tax nation. Needless to say, high tariff people do not like Secretary Hull's program.

"Buy American" has plenty of political "oomph." The G. O. P. needs campaign ammunition and they will make the most of decrying these trade pacts. They claim, for instance, that the program permits an excessive influx of farm products—$800,000,000 worth in 1939. But Secretary Hull points out that $530,000,000 of this was coffee, rubber, silk, cocoa, bananas, which have always been admitted duty free!

The state department is prepared to defend its policies at all costs. The Republican heavy artillery is laying down the battle's opening barrage. What the outcome will be no one knows. The New Deal's record is full of broken promises and failure. For this reason, it seems likely that poor strategy for the Republican shock troops to assault the one position on which the New Deal is economically impregnable—its foreign trade policy. As a statistician, I believe that the Hull trade pacts should be backed

Use of 'Modern Conveniences' Grows During 10-Year Period

If use of facilities offered by public utilities is any indication, residents of Appleton are "better off" in 1939 than in the radiantly prosperous year of 1929.

The use of electric power, gas, water, and telephone has increased considerably in the city during the decade from 1929 to 1939, a survey shows.

The Wisconsin Michigan Power company, for example, had 7,370 residential customers on its power lines in the city at the end of 1939, compared with 6,106 at the end of 1929. The company added 197 new customers last year in Appleton.

But what is regarded by the company as being of far greater importance has been the advance in the rate of kilowatt hour consumption during the 10-year period.

Among residential customers in the company's southern division, the average annual kilowatt hour consumption has increased from 629 at the beginning of 1935 to 1,067 at the close of November, 1939.

The company had 5,679 gas customers at the end of last year, compared with 5,382 at the close of 1929. During 1939, 39 new customers were added.

The installation of 174 meters by the Appleton water department during last year brings the total number in the city to 7,257, an increase of 1,278 over the number of customers at the close of 1929. Installations during the early depression years dropped below the 100 mark, but have returned to normalcy the last few years.

The number of Wisconsin Telephone company owned stations in Appleton, both business and resi-

The slide is being built under a WPA project directed by the park board.
